Nutrient Legislation Needs Work, Farmer Input

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Nutrient management legislation has resurfaced among state agricultural leaders as an issue of concern to Pennsylvania farmers.

Most attention has focused on legislation that passed the House June 10 and has since been under the control of the state Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee. That legislation is House Bill 496.

The committee has yet to act on the proposal, and has received some criticism from those wishing to see it enacted.

On Wednesday, representatives from the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and the Sierra Club visited legislators and journalists in an effort to bring attention to the bill.

Representing the bay foundation was its president William Baker; Bob Hoyt, executive director of the Pennsylvania office of the foundation, and Lamonte Garber, its agricultural policy specialist.

Representing the Sierra Club was Jeffrey Schmidt, its registered Pennsylvania lobbyist.

While not critical of anyone specifically, the representatives of the two organizations said they were concerned that the legislation, which they worked to help achieve, would be lost in the shuffle of other legislative issues during the current session.

In discussing the bill, they said they were concerned about the life of the bill because it had received

Composting Dead Birds Solves Environmental Problem

EPHRATA(Lancaster Co.)—Mortality rates in poultry operations can run up to three percent of the housed birds. That's 1500 dead birds per 50,000. So what do you do with all the carcasses?

"It's harder and harder to dispose of dead birds through rendering," said John Schwartz, Lancaster County agent. "And burying the birds is likely illegal. Incineration is costly and causes odors and nuisance complaints from the neighbors."

But one poultryman on Diamond Station Road has found an answer that uses old environmentally safe technology to overcome this major modern problem.

Muraski Named State Association Fair Queen

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.)—The representative of the Green-Dreher-Sterling Fair emerged from the field of 34 young ladies as the new 1992 Queen of the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs.

Cheryl Anne Muraski, the 16-year-old daughter of Joseph and Carol Anne Muraski, Matamoras, was named the winner of the contest held at the recent 80th annual convention held in the convention center. Runner-up from the Manheim Farm Show was Jacy Clugston, the 17-year-old daughter of Kenneth and Phyllis Clugston, Manheim. The queen represents the state association at many of the local fairs held through the year.

Cheryl is ranked first in her senior class at Delaware Valley High School and she plans to attend Cornell University upon graduation. Active in civic and academic groups, Cheryl is listed in Who's Who Among American

Berks Dairy Farmers Learn Importance Of Cow Comfort

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks County) — Cow comfort in housing is the best insurance against herd problems, said a Penn State extension agent Thursday.

Pat Richie, multi-county ag engineer, spoke on some of the latest innovations in animal housing at Dairy Day in the Berks County Agricultural Center. More than 100 Berks dairy farmers attended.

"We're better off if we keep our cows comfortable in their stalls," Richie said. "When you stress them, production goes down." Cutting costs in building smaller stalls may cause more problems down the road if cows are not comfortable, he said.

Richie showed slides of a newly remodeled heifer barn, owned by a Franklin County farmer.

The open barn is modeled after a design developed by the Virginia Polytechnical Institute. Though one side is exposed to the outside even in the bitterest winter weather, Richie said the barn stays relatively warm.

Forty to 50 degrees is ideal for milk producing, Richie said. Along with that, however, cows need space.

The standard for free stalls used to be 26 feet long, he said. But now the ideal length is 30 feet for a yearling and 40 feet for heifers who are ready to be calved.

Richie pointed out that a milking cow who does not have enough room may leave her stall and lie down in the alley, thus inviting disease and possible culling from the

At the awards banquet of the Pennsylvania Young Farmers' Association held in Grantville Wednesday, a number of awards were presented. Manheim had the largest chapter, and Line Mountain had the largest increase in membership. Feb. 5, 1992

Prices were unchanged to lower in the North Atlantic region, and the Midwest, and unchanged elsewhere. The market tone was barely steady to weak. Demand was light to moderate. Supplies were at least adequate, and extra eggs were readily available to disinterested wholesale buyers. Offerings to breakers increased and prices were lower. Live hen offerings decreased under a fully steady to firm trade sentiment, and buyers provided a moderate to good demand in an attempt to fill slaughter schedules.

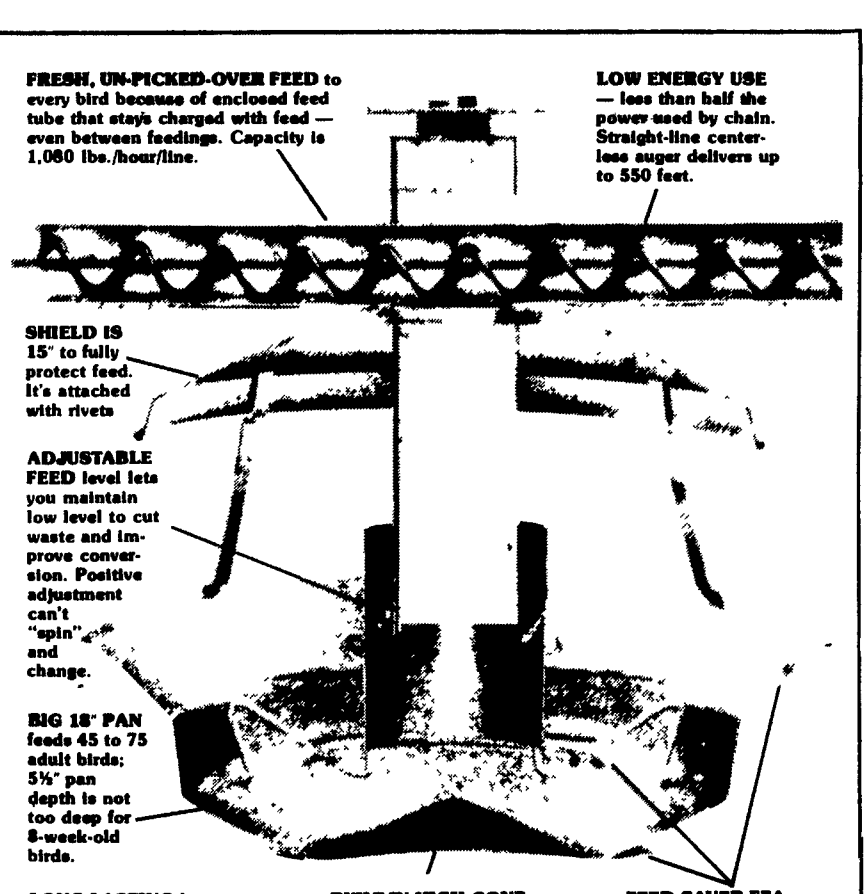
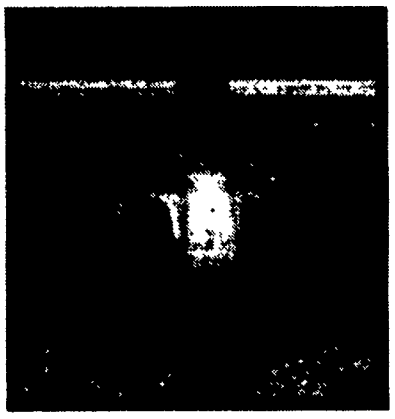
Let Us Build A New TURKEY HOUSE For You With CHORE-TIME® Feeding Equipment



FRESH, UN-PICKED-OVER FEED to every bird because of enclosed feed tube that stays charged with feed — even between feedings. Capacity is 1,080 lbs./hour/line.
LOW ENERGY USE — less than half the power used by chain. Straight-line centerless auger delivers up to 550 feet.
SHIELD IS 15" to fully protect feed. It's attached with rivets
ADJUSTABLE FEED level lets you maintain low level to cut waste and improve conversion. Positive adjustment can't "spin" and change.
BIG 18" PAN feeds 45 to 75 adult birds; 5½" pan depth is not too deep for 8-week-old birds.
LONG-LASTING because it's designed just for turkeys; 20 ga. galvanized steel, no bolts or screws.
BUILT-IN HIGH CONE distributes feed in pan, avoids build-up in tube.
FEED-SAVER FEATURES: unique "V" pan shape lets you maintain a low level; feed-saver ring; 2½" pan lip to catch feed.
CONTROL PAN at end of line operates system on demand any time of day.
10-YEAR AUGER warranty: no one else comes close.



- FEED WINDOWS and Feed Gate (1) floods feeder pan with plenty of feed to attract and start poults from the first day they are put on the feeder. After birds get started, Feed Gate in "open" position (2) can be quickly put in "closed" position (3) with a simple flick-of-the-wrist. Closed Feed Gate means feeder is adjusted to low feed levels (4) for top feed conversion.
- ALL-PLASTIC FEEDER consists of 3 simple, rugged polypropylene parts (5) for permanent corrosion-proofing. Pan easily removes (6) for clean-out and hangs from feeder for drying and storage.

OPINION

Old Fashioned Method To Solve Modern Problem

For a long time poultrymen have wrestled with the problem of how to dispose of dead birds from their operations. If the losses come when the birds are small, the problem involves less volume. But large carcasses create more headaches.

As Lancaster County Agent John Schwartz says, "Rendering is less of an option in recent times."

In addition, to bury the dead birds causes environmental problems that make this option illegal. And incineration causes odors and brings complaints from the neighbors.

A report on page one of this issue tells of the old method of composting and how one poultryman has solved the problem. Floyd High, a Lancaster County farmer, uses this method successfully.

In the composting process, not only do the bones and feathers disintegrate, but the heat that is generated is of high enough temperature to destroy all the viruses and diseases. A very low cost method, composting works in large or small operations.

We believe composting of dead birds in poultry operations is a true case of an old-fashioned method that has great merits to solve a modern-day problem.

NOW IS THE TIME

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Increase Poultry Biosecurity

We are in the middle of a major Laryngotracheitis (LT) outbreak. This highly contagious viral disease reminds us of the importance of biosecurity.

If at all possible, do not visit other poultry farms, backyard poultry flocks, auctions selling poultry, or poultry exhibits. If you must visit these places, wear coveralls, hat and boots.

Disinfect your boots and place your clothing in a plastic bag. When you return home, wash your clothes using a disinfectant, shower, and change clothes before checking your own birds.

Do not allow other people to walk through your poultry house. Also, look for ways to reduce bird stress (temperature, ammonia, moisture, etc.).

By following good biosecurity and staying away from other birds, you will greatly reduce your chances of having a major disease outbreak.

To Control Water Leaks

Water leaks in poultry houses are one of the most serious production problems we have. Water leaks cause wet manure which increase ammonia levels, odors, and flies.

The only way to remove moisture from a poultry house is through the ventilation system. By adding extra water to the house in the form of water leaks means you must move more air through the house.

On cold days this is not very practical. In addition, salmonella could become a major problem.

Bacteria needs moisture in order to grow. By keeping the poultry house dry you are reducing the opportunities for salmonella to grow. By taking care of water leaks right away, you are solving many problems.

To Prepare For Dry Weather

Historical weather data suggests that droughts appear in 25- to 30-year cycles. Based on this information, the 1990s could be the next drought years (dust bowl of the 1930s and the drought of mid-1960s).

We are seeing wells, springs, and streams at very low levels for this time of year. In addition, the subsoil is very dry.

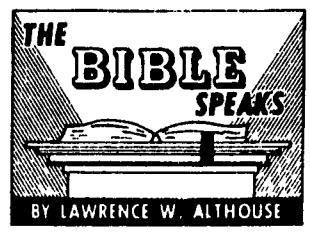
We should be thinking about planning strategies in case we have another dry year. To compound the problem, we have more people living in the area and using more water per person than we did in the 1960s.

Water rationing could become a reality. Some items to consider are reducing number of animals on farm (by using one less chicken per cage or by culling low producing or marginal cattle), looking for ways to reduce water waste and use, locating new water supplies, and storing water.

Attention should be given to crop selection, planting times, and tillage methods.

You might want to consider purchasing crop insurance. By doing some planning now, you could reduce your loses if we experience another dry year.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Take time to laugh — it is the music of the soul."



WHO IS #1?

Background Scripture: Matthew 20:17-28.

Devotional Reading: John 13:12-17

We live in a world where being "number one" is extremely important. That is how success is measured. As we climb the ladder of our vocation or avocation, we become more successful — at least as society reckons it. As Jesus reckons it, however, success may have nothing at all to do with society's measurements. As in almost everything else, the teachings of Jesus about being "number one" are radically different from what the world teaches us.

Once again, we Christians are somewhat schizoid on this score. We embrace Jesus' teachings on this matter, but we generally run our churches by the world's standards. Who is successful in the church? The clergyman who pastors the largest church or becomes bishop. The layman who wields the most influence and holds the highest positions of lay power.

I have no aspirations of ever being a bishop. Nevertheless, if tomorrow I were informed that I had just been elected bishop, I would certainly feel successful beyond my greatest expectations. The same would be true if I were offered "the largest pulpit in Methodism." That would be success, wouldn't it?

LORDING IT OVER

That standard of success has been with us a long time. It was this standard that led the mother of James and John of Zebedee to ask Jesus, "Command that these two sons of mine may sit, one at your right hand and one at your left, in your kingdom" (Matthew 20:21). What mother wouldn't want that for her sons? Jesus recognized this human desire: "You know that the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great men exercise authority over them." Having the power to "Lord it over" someone else has always been the world's measure of success.

Until Jesus came, saying: "It shall not be so among you; but whoever would be great among you must be your servant, and whosoever would be first among you must be your slaves; even as the Son of man came not to be served but to serve . . ." (20:26-28). Once again, Jesus recognizes the human desire to be great or first. He does not criticize James, John and their mother for wanting to be first in the kingdom of heaven next to Jesus. What he does do, however, is to give them a radically different way of being the greatest: by being a servant to others.

Once again, Jesus is looking to the long run, instead of the short run. In the short run, "lording it over" others seems to be the way to success. But, in the long run, that doesn't work or count for real success. What works in the long run is the willingness to serve, rather than to be served. Only in serving others can we truly be "number one."

WILLING TO SERVE

Writing on this is a very uncomfortable experience for me, for I know how likely I am to judge success, not by the standards of Jesus, but by those of the secular world. I believe with all my mind that a Christian must be willing to serve others as Christ did, but I don't very often live by those beliefs. If someone came to me today, not to tell me that I had been elected bishop, but to inform me that God had chosen for me the servant's role in a specific situation, could I feel that same degree of satisfaction? Could I view this as a superior means to becoming "number one."

Could you?

Knight Slinger Spreaders...

IF IT ISN'T A KNIGHT... IT'S NOT A SLINGER!!!

It's the differences that count:

- Only Knight uses a friction clutch protected full flighted auger where others use paddles welded onto tube steel...
- Only Knight uses twelve free swinging hammers to expel material — no shear pins — no fixed paddle expeller...
- Only Knight uses triple sealed, greasable bearings where others use bushings...

Viking Ship® Calcium Nitrate

15.5-0-0-19Ca

The fertilizer to start with ...the fertilizer to stay with

GROWTH

Nitrate nitrogen is the fast-acting, controllable N-source for fruit trees. Unlike ammonium nitrogen (NH_4), nitrate-N affords optimum nutrition timing for rapid growth and early production. Calcium Nitrate supplies 14.5% nitrate nitrogen.

QUALITY

Calcium availability, at adequate levels, is essential to early and sustained production of high-quality tree fruit. Young trees, as well as mature, producing orchards never outgrow their need for calcium.

Specifically, root vigor, reduced fruit disorders, optimum color and size and storage quality of fruit are directly related to adequate calcium levels. With Calcium Nitrate as your orchard fertilizer, trees and soil receive 19% water-soluble calcium.

YIELD

Heavy production of high-quality tree fruit has been achieved—for more than 40 years—by growers using Viking Ship Calcium Nitrate fertilizer.

Use Calcium Nitrate in your fertilizer program. You will be pleased by the predictable response—the growth, quality and yield improvement possible with Calcium Nitrate's combination of essential orchard nutrients. For the life of your trees...Calcium Nitrate...the fertilizer to start with, the fertilizer to stay with!

As with any fertilizer application, consult your extension office or other advisory service for recommended practice that meets local crop and soil conditions.

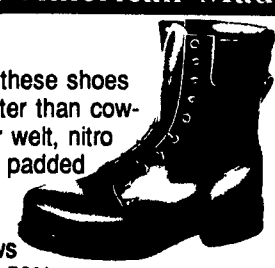
HORSEHIDE

GENUINE HORSEHIDE

Barnyard Acid Resistant American Made



Made of tough, long wearing horsehide, these shoes stand manure, silage, oil and grease better than cowhide. Shoes feature a genuine Goodyear welt, nitro cork sole that will not track, steel shank, padded collar, cushion insole and arch support. Ideal for barn use. Sizes 7-13 including ½ sizes. 1st quality. Our experience shows that horsehide outlasts good cowhide by 50% or more for farm use.

VALUE ANALYSIS:

These results from 1991 Penn State Yield Trials indicate that for a 50-acre alfalfa grower there can be as much as $27,600 difference using a public variety and as much as $24,800 using a leading competitive variety over the 4 yr. life of that alfalfa stand.

Don't worry about saving a Few Dollars on the Seed only to loose thousands in the Field!

Seems like every seed company that sells alfalfa is coming out with a multi-leaf variety. And each new one is supposed to produce more extra leaves than the one just before it.

Well, Jacques has one too, but the reason I decided to seed some of their Multi-plier last spring had very little to do with the extra leaves it produces. I bought it because of its outstanding yield, its winter-hardiness and its 24 out of 25 disease resistance rating by the University of Wisconsin. The multi-leaf trait was just a bonus.

Don't get me wrong. I'm glad the seed companies keep trying to outdo each other because that's how better varieties get developed. But with my Multi-plier, Jacques didn't forget why I grow alfalfa in the first place.

Casey Proposes Ag Cuts

HARRISBURG — Gov. Casey's budget remarks did not address agriculture, but a look at the proposed state spending plan shows major cuts for many programs, according to Sen. Edward Helfrick (R-27).

"Continued efforts to impress upon the governor that agriculture is one of the mainstays of the state's economy have not gotten through to him," said Helfrick, who noted that the governor's economic recovery remarks centered on programs based in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

The governor proposed cuts for agricultural research, agricultural promotion, the Farm Show, agricultural fairs and nutrient management under the state Department of Environmental Resources. Funding for mushroom promotion, emergency apple marketing, the Future Farmers, the School of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, and the Milk Marketing Board is eliminated in the governor's plan.

"Farmers are forced to meet more and more mandates, but funding that would assist them continues to dwindle," said Helfrick, who chairs the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee. "Passing over the state's most important industry and major exporter is going to cost the state dearly in the long run."

Helfrick acknowledged that Fiscal Year 1992-1993 would definitely be a tight budget year that requires spending reductions, but said he would be advocating cuts to different agencies and programs that he feels are outdated or superfluous, as well as pushing for privatization efforts and programs that would generate new revenue, such as the tax amnesty proposal passed by the Senate yesterday.

Nutrient Legislation Needs

support from all agricultural organizations and environmental organizations who testified before the House, and has been apparently idled in the wake of more recent legislative proposals.

According to the groups, the current legislation is a compromise arrived at after many discussions with lawmakers, representatives of agricultural organizations and others who would be directly involved in implementing the program.

However, they said that as long as the bill's intent was not changed, they would go along with amendments which clarified wording.

During a Wednesday morning farmers' seminar sponsored by Lebanon Valley National Bank in Prescott, Lebanon County, Sheila Miller, executive director of the Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee, urged farmers to study the proposed legislation, consider how nutrients could be effectively managed, and to provide their opinions to their legislators.

Miller said that at least one researcher has estimated that if nutrient management legislation were to be approved as it is written in HB 496 about 10,000 farmers would go out of business as a result.

In theory, the bill would eventually require virtually all farmers file plans.

The bill targets those who conduct agricultural operations (definition includes raising of all animals and plants) who fertilize with "animal manure," or raise livestock or poultry, commercially or otherwise on 10 or more acres.

Not included are landowners who allow municipal waste to be applied to their land, although a definition of "animal manure" is not made.

Those affected by the bill would have to file plans as to how they intend to use or dispose of animal manure and nutrients. The specifics of what information would be required in the plan would be decided by conservation commission.

Those, whose livestock or poultry exceed a certain number per acre, would be required to have the plans further approved by local conservation district personnel.

A certification program is to be set up by the department of agriculture so that farmers or others could qualify to approve plans and create approved plans.

All plans have to be approved by a certified person before they are submitted to the conservation district.

In more specificity, the proposal sets up the state Conservation Commission (an autonomous board which oversees the state's soil conservation districts) to create regulations and guidelines for making nutrient management plans. The commission is also to create enforcement parameters.

The board has been chaired by the secretary of DER, but is not controlled by DER.

The law would create a Nutrient Management Advisory Board to the commission to review and comment on all regulations, criteria and policies the commission proposes.

Also, the law would establish a limit for penalties for failure to comply with the regulations that could not exceed $500 per offense.

But the legislation leaves interpretation of how the penalties are to be meted out up to the commission.

As written, the law would allow local municipalities to create and enforce their own nutrient management regulations, as long as they are not inconsistent with the state law.

However, there has been some question as to what "inconsistent" would legally mean.

One interpretation offered is that a local ordinance would be consistent with the law if it were more restrictive, as long as it were not more liberal.

The fear is that farmers would be subject to the possibility of municipalities creating ordinances with the real intent of driving certain farms out of the community for reasons other than poor nutrient management.

The wording in the proposed law regarding that provision is under scrutiny, since it was agreed during hearings that the intent of the law is to prevent local municipalities from creating tough, prohibitively expensive and complex local laws that would drive farmers out of business.

Schmidt said that if the legislation were changed to ban local enforcement and ordinances concerning nutrient management, the Sierra Club would not endorse the legislation. They would continue to support the legislation, however if the wording required local ordinances to mirror exactly the state law — no more liberal and no more restrictive.

Other potential problems with the legislation as approved by the House include the definition of an agricultural operation, which, as worded, would include any size crop, livestock or poultry production operation — ranging from raising a handful of rabbits or keeping a summer garden to large, animal-dense commercial operations.

No distinction is technically made between hobby, or own-use production and commercial operations.

Technically, as written, HB 496 could affect more than commercial farming.

Also offering a potential problem is the standard for stocking rate.

The proposed law creates a standard for stocking rate that is based on something called an "animal equivalent unit."

And animal equivalent unit is defined as 1,000 pounds liveweight of any livestock or poultry, regardless of species, breed or number of animals.

Under the guidelines provided, those who would wish to own or raise livestock at a density of more than two animal units per acre would have to submit a nutrient management plan for review and approval by the local conservation district.

For poultry, the rate is one unit per acre.

The proposal leaves room for the commission to create its own regulations.

However, the commission is bound to follow DER's lead under the legislation because it would only be able to create regulations that follow the DER publication, "Manure Management For Environmental Protection."

The publication was orginally developed to serve as an educational tool for farmers, according to Miller, who had helped create the educational manual.

However, Miller and her boss, Sen. Edward Helfrick, chairman of the committee, have said they are currently not seeking to discuss the specifics of HB 496, but rather, they said they are still open to hear other alternatives to nutrient management.

Toward that effort, the Senate ag committee has scheduled a public hearing on Feb. 12 at Bloomsburg State College in Columbia County to hear testimony on the issue. It is to be held in the Forum Room, located on the third floor of the McCormick Human Services Building.

Professional representatives are discouraged from giving testimony.

The purpose is to hear testimony from practicing farmers about nutrient mangement in general, not HB 496.

However, those reviewing HB 496 may want to also consider:

- Funding from the state to support the program has been eliminated by Gov. Casey, even when it was budgeted.
- Research programs seeking better methods of determining nutrient load at a farm are being developed at Penn State University, but funding has been slashed. Potential new methods would use the amount of feed purchased by a farmer during a normal year to determine whether or not excessive nutrients are being concentrated at a specific site and need to be managed properly.
- Manure application reccommendations included in the DER manual were based on application rates which are more than 20 years old. The diets of livestock and poultry have changed significantly since then, therefore the nutrient contents have changed. Obstensibly, since food is being more efficiently used, there should be less average nutrient value to modern manure compared to that produced more than 20 years ago.
- Nutrient testing methods were just developed and significant changes can be expected to come soon, pending adequate funding of research.
- The state is under a signed agreement with Maryland and Virginia to permanently reduce the volume of nitrogen into the Chesapeake by 40 percent by the year 2000. If an effective nutrient management law doesn't go into effect soon, that 40-percent reduction goal may be unattainable.

Cornucopia: Showcase Of Pennsylvania Agriculture

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—Each year the Keystone Cornucopia dinner showcases the state's broad agricultural and related industries. Sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations, farmers, agribusiness people and political representatives meet across the table to share acquaintances.

This year's event Monday evening featured many products from Pennsylvania's ag community, and the keynote speaker was Charles McDowell of the Washington Bureau of the Richmond Times-Dispatch and the Washington Week in Review.

"Democorcacy has just had its greatest victory," McDowell said. "With the fall of Communisium, the American system does work, and even thorough bumbling and falling down, we have had a triumphant time. Our system has worked, and it is worth trying to do something about it.

McDowell said the current reality is that we need to address the deficit, and we might as well know we are going to cut social security, and we will have new taxes.

The savings and loan scandal has cost us more than all the welfare programs. We have been manipulated by the rich people, and it has cost us a lot more than welfare.

Only 10 percent of the average American family's income goes for food, and McDowell said if he were a farmer he would repeat this 22 times per day and take out ads to say it. Twelve percent of our income goes for health care, and it goes up 15 percent each year.

Social security taxes are powerful because three-fourths of the American people pay more social security taxes than they pay income tax.

He called the New Hampshire primary the largest small event in the histroy of American politics. Every president elected since 1950 has been a winner of the New Hampshire primary. The winner becomes not only the leader but also the presumed leader.

On political issues he said that health care reform, middle class tax cuts and unemployment compensation were the major items in this election year. These issues came into play because of the recession and the feeling that no future generation will do as well as we have done. Therefore, we are afraid of the Japanese who do certain things better than we do.

McDowell reported a statistical fact, that there has been no increase in family income adjusted for inflation since 1971. In that amazing period, the median family with a second working person has not increased income. It's still about $29 to $30 thousand.

At the close of the dinner meeting senators and representatives in the State congress received baskets of food produced in Pennsylvania.

York Sets Beef Meeting

YORK (York Co.) — York County Cooperative Extension will sponsor a beef producer's dinner meeting on Thursday, February 13 starting at 6 p.m. at the 4-H Center at Bair's Station.

Feedlot operators will benefit from Dr. Bill Henning's knowledge of pricing considerations for market cattle. Henning is extension meats specialist at Penn State University.

Cow/calf producers who have short forage supplies following the summer drought will learn how to utilize low quality forages during Tim Beck's presentation on ammoniation of forages such as straws and crop residues. Interested persons planning to attend are asked to call the York County Extension Office at (717) 757-9657 to be included in the meal reservation list. Cost for the dinner will be $5.25.

• Pricing Market Cattle. As more beef is sold directly to packers, it becomes increasingly important for producers to understand how the value of their product is determined. Discussion will focus on dressing percentage, the importance of quality grading to the consumer, and the effects of yield grade on carcass value for both the packer and retailer. Boxed beef and the "new" primal cuts of beef will be discussed along with a comparison of the value of beef type vs. dairy type animals. Beef producers will have the knowledge to increase returns from cattle sold because of improved understanding of pricing considerations.

• Short on Winter Feed Supplies? Dry weather conditions this past summer may have left cow/calf operators with short forage supplies. The "stack method" for ammoniating low quality straws and crop residues has been successfully used to increase the crude protein of low quality roughages and dramatically improve the palatability of the forage. This session will address the technique used for ammoniation of forages, the effect of ammoniation on forage quality and appropriate supplementation of ammoniated forages. Ammoniated forages have been used as the sole forage for beef cows in late gestation when appropriately supplemented. If low quality straws are available, producers may be able to reduce costs by ammoniating these materials, rather than purchasing more expensive hays. Producers will learn how to ammoniate forages to reduce feed expenses in cow/calf operations when hay supplies are short.

For more information, contact Tim Beck, extension livestock agent at the York County Extension Office at (717) 757-9657, or stop by the Office at 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402.

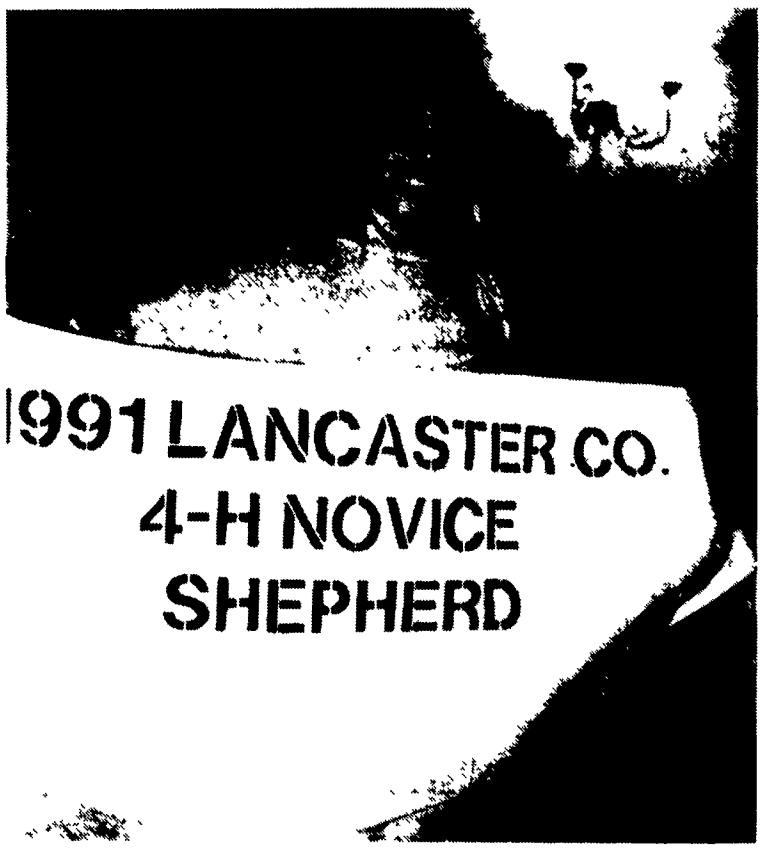
Tracy Is Shepherd, Weaver Donates $1,000 At 4-H Banquet



Novice Shepherd Jessica Schmidt, 9, holds up the honorary banner.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — During a year where 4-H meant the words "competition" to him, the culmination of many experiences as a seven-year Lancaster County 4-H member paid off handsomely for Mark Tracy, 16, when he took home the coveted 1991 Shepherd of the Year trophy Thursday night at the Lancaster County 4-H banquet.

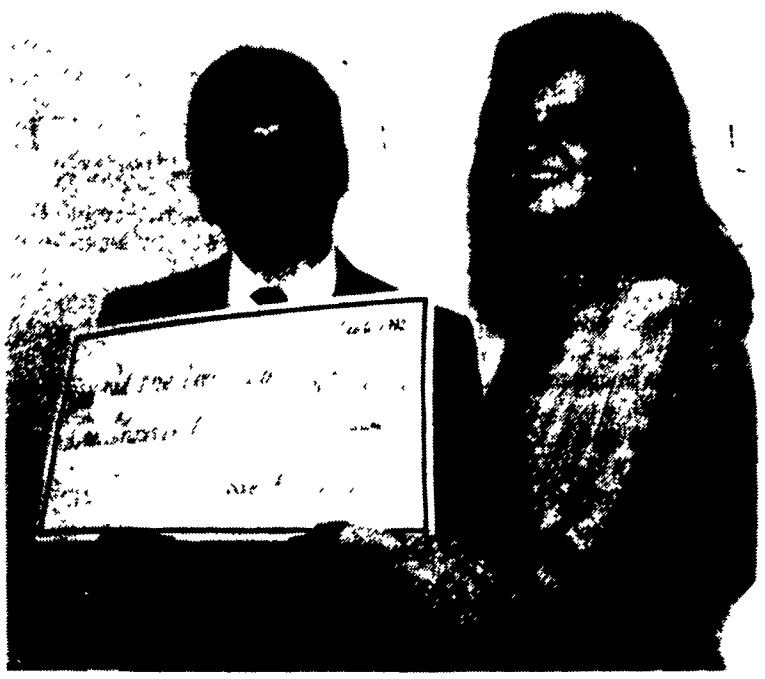
Mark, the son of Gerald and Helen Tracy, Elizabethtown, is a sophomore at Elizabethtown High School. He said he was "very surprised and very appreciative" of the recognition, and believes his experiences in 4-H, and of being a member of the award-winning senior 4-H livestock team, will help him in college and his career. Mark said he is considering Penn State, where he will attend either veterinarian school or to major in pre-med.

Jessica Schmidt, 9, was honored as Novice Shepherd at the banquet. Jessica, the daughter of Pete and Laurie Schmidt, Lancaster, is in her first year in the 4-H Woolies Club.

Jodie Weaver, 19, New Holland, donated the picture of her record-breaking champion $25,000 Farm Show steer to the purchasers, Hoss's Steak House, which is scheduled to open this week.

Jodie presented a $1,000 check to the Lancaster 4-H to establish a special Herdsman of the Year Award to an outstanding 4-H Beef Club member "who excells in leadership abilities and showmanship, as well as interest in helping others," she said.

Jodie said she would like the funds to help stir more interest in the 4-H Beef Club and to help the 4-H program in general. Jodie, who is majoring in biology at Elizabethtown College, said she eventually will attend graduate school, and the money from the champion steer sale will help pay for tuition.



A check made out to the Lancaster 4-H Beef Club was presented by Jodie Weaver, right, to Chet Hughes to help establish a Herdsman of the Year Award and to benefit the 4-H program.

Chet Hughes, Lancaster livestock agent, congratulated the 4-H members and leaders. "Our Lancaster County 4-H program is successful because of the over 500 dedicated leaders who work with and encourage over 4,000 members of strong, active families and very supportive parents," he said.

The 4-H livestock club has about 154 members, more than 800 head of livestock, and about 30 leaders. At the 1992 state Farm Show, 47 members (about one-third) competed in junior livestock shows and did very well, said Hughes.

A special appreciation award was presented to Salunga Acres, who "have been very supportive of our 4-H livestock programs over the past few years," said Hughes. "And 1991 was no exception. In fact, I felt at times that I was calling on them above and beyond the call of duty." Hughes said that owners George and Dottie Metzler, manager C.J. Appoints Administrators

AMES, Iowa — The National Farmers Organization (NFO) has appointed three new top-level administrators.

Mark Rohlfing is director of the grain department. Richard Ellinghuysen is director of the livestock department. Ron Strand is treasurer and trust administrator.

At its January meeting, the NFO Board of Directors approved the appointment of the three.

Prior to his appointment Rohlfing, 37, was serving as director of operations for the grain department. Previously, he served as the chief bargainer for the grain department, as director of the NFO Field Staff, and as assistant director of the field staff. He began his NFO employment in 1976 as a negotiator in the livestock department. He was elected to the National Board of Directors in 1984 and served three years.

A graduate of the University of Missouri with an honors degree in agriculture, Rohlfing still owns and operates a farm in central Missouri.

Before being named livestock director, Ellinghuysen, 35, served one year as assistant director in the livestock department. He began his NFO employment in 1987 as a 6-month trainee in all departments. He was first promoted to handle the risk management programs in livestock. Eventually he helped computerize the department's management and accounting systems, served as the department's acting comptroller, and developed and managed the department's risk management programs for hogs, feeder cattle and slaughter cattle.

In 1989 Ellinghuysen developed and started publishing the monthly "Profit Memo," which is mailed to cattle producers using NFO risk management programs.

He was raised on a diversified farm near Winona, Minn., and farmed with his father and brother for eight years before coming to the NFO. He served as vice president of the Winona County NFO.

As treasurer and trust administrator, Strand returns to a job he had from June 1989 to March 1991. Prior to returning to Ames, he had been working as area dairy director in the NFO dairy office in Minster, Ohio.

Strand began his NFO employment in 1970 as grain accountant in the Arlington, S.D., NFO office. From 1972-75, he worked as dairy accountant in the Salina, Ohio, dairy office.

From 1975 to 1987, he farmed near Ellindale, N.D., raising grains and hogs. He still maintains an operational interest in the farm.

In 1987 he moved back to Ohio as NFO assistant dairy director. Then in 1989 he was appointed treasurer and trust administrator. In March 1991 he went to the Minster, Ohio, dairy office as assistant dairy director and was promoted to area dairy director in July 1991.

PDPP Reviews Dairy Promotions

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)— The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program's fourth annual meeting offered a summary of 1991 promotion activities and a motivational presentation by Kent Tekulve, a former ball player with the Pittsburgh Pirates and Philadelphia Phillies.

The meeting, held in State College, was attended by more than 100 dairy farmers and promoters from throughout Pennsylvania.

"Teke really provided direction to our audience and board members," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "His speech was both entertaining and educational. I especially appreciated his understanding of the dairy industry and support of our CHEERS, Non-Alcoholic Dairy Beverage Program."

Tekulve's address focused the audience on their jobs and responsibilities in the dairy industry. He stated that to be successful, individuals need to take three steps in their activities.

First, a person must know his job. This includes all of the information about the dairy industry, your task and more.

Second, an individual needs to know his opponents, who they are and what they are trying to accomplish.

And, "thirdly, and most importantly, you need to have conviction for your job or task," said Tekulve. "this is the most difficult of the three steps because conviction comes from within." This final step gives you the strength to do what you believe and know is right.

Before Tekulve, the audience learned more about the promotion activities conducted by the PDPP in 1991. The panel presentation was a yearly review of several PDPP marketing areas. Jim Moser of the D'Arcy, Masius, Benton and Bowles Agency, discussed fluid milk and ice cream advertising campaigns; Ross reviewed sports promotion activities; Peggy Pettingell, director of Nutrition Education at the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, presented nutrition education activities in Pennsylvania; and Betsy Dupuis, PDPP communications director, explained consumer promotion events.

At the meeting, the PDPP selected the second "Promoter of the Year." Eugene Schurman, an extension agent from Indiana County, won the award. Schurman was nominated by the Indiana County Promotion Committee for his assistance and guidance of their promotion activities over many years.

He thanked Indiana County promoters for the recognition and said "they were the real workers in the county's promotion efforts."

Laura England, of Bucks County, was also recognized as a finalist in the contest.

Ag Seminar Held At Bank

BLUE BALL (Lancaster Co.)—A number of pertinent subjects were presented to farmers at the Blue Ball National Bank annual ag seminar.

Some of these topics included hog production, the outlook for prices, warnings about scams, and how to make your farm profitable.

Doug Clemens, director, hog procurement, Hatfield Packing, said the greatest need for hog production is to develop a uniform product. "We have such a variety of weight and carcass sizes that come into our plant, and this makes it hard to package a uniform product," Clemens said. The trend is toward paying producers on a carcass merit basis, and many producers are still taking 50 cents per hunderweight cuts because their hogs are too heavy or too light."

Ideal weight is 210 to 216 pounds.

Clemens said farmers need a weight management program that includes a scales somewhere on the finishing floor so that guess work is taken out of the program.

"The name of the game is a consistent, uniform product," Clemens said.

Dr. Robert Yonkers, professor, ag economics, Penn State, said the outlook for livestock and poultry depends on the recession. He looks for hog prices to decrease because of the increased production being reported. Poultry prices will likely remain steady except that turkeys took a beating over the holidays and may not have a quick recovery.

Yonkers looks for milk prices to average about 50 cents higher over the 1992 year.

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County agent, warned farmers about scams that are presented in rural areas. "When bargain buys seem too good to be true, they probably are," Shirk said. "When your inner ear says be careful, you should. When greed overrides good sense, you better be aware. Know who your are dealing with, and check references and data. Depend on reliable people and tested products," Shirk said.

David Kohl, professor, ag economics, Virginia Tech, said deferred taxes will be the biggest hidden liablilty on all farmer's balance sheets and medical costs will be the biggest expense threat on the cash flow statement.

"An expense/revenue ration (excluding depreciation and interest) above 80 percent combined with debt to equity exceeding one, is the double dip of death," Kohl said. "Interest to revenue should not exceed 20 percent, and return on assets should be greater than the weighted cost of capital."

This was the ninth annual ag seminar and Kenneth Overly, assistant vice president, ag sales/service manager, was in charge of the meeting.

Producer Exchange

DENVER, Colo. — Six sheep producers from across the nation will be given the opportunity for free travel to another sheep producer's operation. Producers will be doing this by participating in a new Producer Exchange program planned by the American Sheep Industry Association's Member Services Committee.

The Producer Exchange program is an effort by ASI's Member Services Committee to develop a broader understanding of sheep production techniques between producer members of state sheep associations.

To apply for the Producer Exchange program, a producer must contact his/her state association for an application. The application asks information about the producer's operation and his/her wishes on the type of operation he/she would like to visit. Participants will also be required to write a diary or journal type column for submission to the National Wool Grower magazine. Applications are to be submitted to ASI by March 15.

Six producers are to be paired by ASI's Member Services Committee. The committee will match producers based on their compatability and learning potential which will be determined from candidate's respective applications. Successful candidates will then be notified and their airfare wm be provided by ASI.

Composting Dead Birds

Maryland to inquire about their plans to build a composting unit on his 54,000 bird poultry farm. The plans from the university needed to be scaled down to fit the size of this Lancaster County farm. But the principle of operation is the same for both large and small farmers.

"To compost dead chickens, we start with a layer of chicken manure, add a layer of dead chickens, then a layer of straw, and add some water," High said. "Then you start over again until the bin is filled."

In a composting setup, the fermenting process heats the material up to 130 degrees or higher. This kills all the viruses and other diseases at the same time the feathers and bones are decomposed. After two weeks the material is moved by skid loader to the next bin and the natural heating process is repeated.

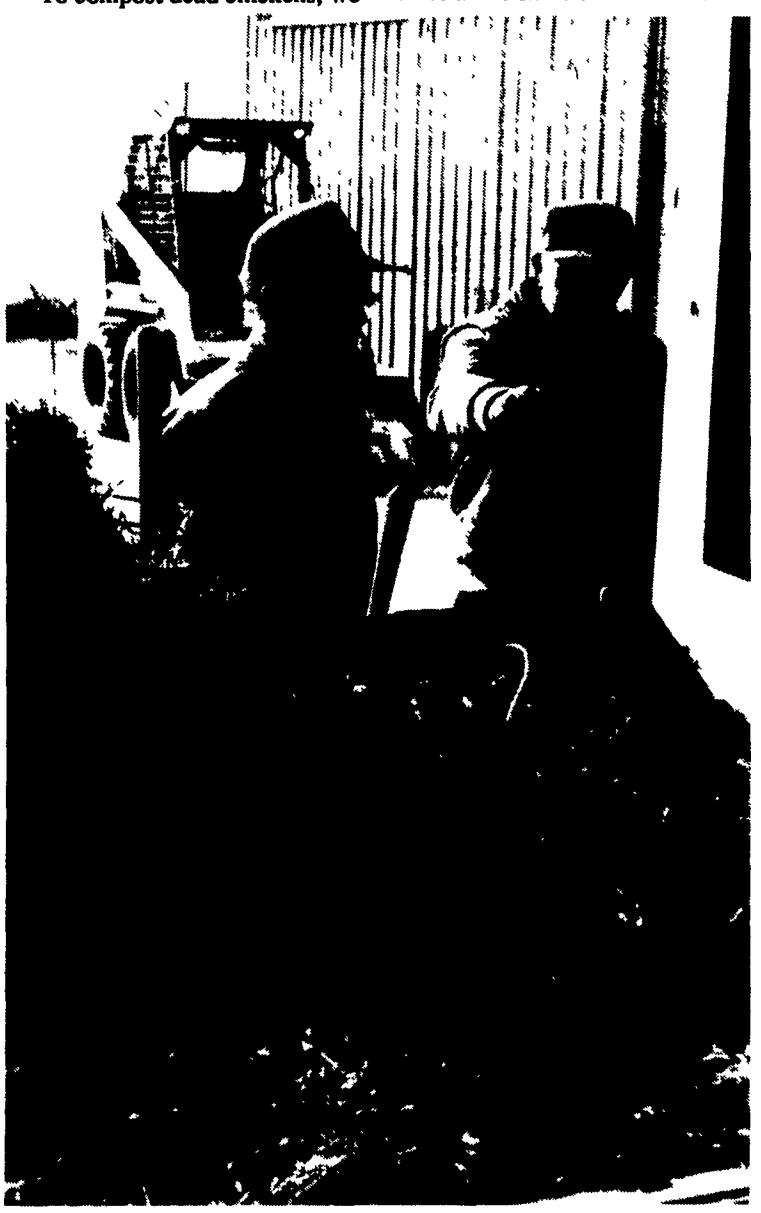
After this two-step process is completed, the dead birds have become decomposed, unrecognizable and sterilized, ready for spreading on the fields as manure. The process works as well in winter as summer and fly and odor problems are reduced to what is normally associated with manure.

Charles Ackley, Ephrata Young Farmer advisor, is confident this practice can help all poultry farmers. "This low cost way of disposing of a major problem in poultry operations should be considered by all farmers," Ackley said.

Schwartz agrees. "All the university studies show that the problem viruses are disposed by the composting method," Schwartz said. "I have promoted the idea in several of my columns."

To help poultrymen learn how composting can help in their operations, Ackley has set a meeting date at the Ephrata High School for Tuesday evening, February 11, starting at 7:45 p.m. High and Schwartz will be on the program, and a video of High's composting operation will be shown.

All interested poultry farmers are invited to attend. For more information, Ackley can be reached at the Ephrata High School. Phone: (717) 733-1478. Schwartz can be reached at the county agents office. Phone: (717) 394-6851.



Charles Ackley, right, young farmer advisor, and Floyd High discuss the merits of composting dead birds in a poultry production operation.

to three teachers that won creative teacher awards in the "Pride of Pennsylvania, Dairy Label Contest." Brenda Hartman of Berks County, Ann Smith of Bradford County, and Jean Arrigonie of Clinton County, all received certificates as outstanding promoters.

The PDPP also recognized Brenda Beleski Briggs of the Department of Agriculture for her coordination of the campaign.

The efforts of retiring board members were acknowledged as well. Ronald Gaskill, of Harrisburg and formerly with the Department of Agriculture, received recognition for his work with the Dairy Promotion board.

In accepting the award, Gaskill commented that he enjoyed working with the dairy promotion program. He added that he was especially pleased to be a part of the process that brought the American Dairy Association, Mid East UDIA/F.O. 36 Advertising Agency, and the PDPP together in a cooperative agreement. Susan Beshore of York County was also recognized for serving on the PDPP board.

Following the meeting, guests and others toured the Penn State Creamery, the Milk Quality Testing Laboratory, and the new Animal Industries Building. An evening session for local promoters was also held.

From the left, Carl Kroeck, chairman of the PDPP board of directors presents a gift to Ronald Gaskill in recongition of his support of the promotion program.

Coalition Meets To Discuss Scrapie

DENVER, Colo. — The Scrapie Working Group, a coalition of livestock and related industry associations, met recently with Bill O'Conner, chief of staff to Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan and Lonnie King of APHIS to discuss scrapie certification and indemnity programs.

According to a Scrapie Working Group representative, the meeting succeeded in showing a strong unified support for action by USDA and heightened the awareness at the highest level of the department. The American Sheep Industry Association requested the meeting.

USDA officials stated that they could see no reason why the scrapie certification final rule could not soon be published in the Federal Register. USDA also committed to make the necessary departmental assessments of the program, together with the Office of Management and Budget input and then respond back to the group.

Members of the Scrapie Working Group include the American Sheep Industry Association, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the American Meat Institute, the American Veterinary Medical Association, the Animal Health Institute, the National Cattlemen's Association, the National Milk Producers Association and the National Renderers Association.

herd.

"If they're comfortable, they'll all eat at the same time and want to lay down at the same time and chew their cuds and make more milk," Richie said.

The ideal distance from brisket board to the end of the stall is 66 inches, he said. That way, the cow's rear end is at the edge of the alley where manure can easily be shoveled away and bedding stays clean. Total length of the free stall should be 88 inches.

The extra space in front of the brisket board will give the cow enough lunging room for getting up, Richie said.

As for bedding, studies by Penn State researchers show that cows prefer earth bedding to any other type, such as concrete (which farmers prefer), plank or tires.

Wood and rubber bedding tends to hold moisture, he said, leading to harboring of disease-bearing bacteria.

Four to six inches of tamped clay base is ideal, he said.

"She'll just lay down and be comfortable and not do much digging," Richie said.

A floating neck rail is also preferred, Richie said, because it will give when the cow gets up and she won't bash her shoulders against it.

As for feed bunk height, Richie said studies show cows eat more if their feed is no more than four inches off the ground. When their heads are low while feeding, they will produce more saliva, aiding in digestion, he said.

This type of barn does not need to be built from scratch, he said, noting that the barn illustrating his talk was a remodeled poultry barn.

Copies of the barn plans may be obtained by calling the extension office.

That's because we believe that helping preserve the family farm is one of the best ways to insure a better future for us all. And that involves working with our young people.

It's important to give them guidance, install the proper values, and help them acquire the skills they need to be successful farmers.

The 4-H and FFA are working toward these goals. And so, we support their efforts. If you or someone in your family needs money for a project, stop by and see us. It just might help us all.

PFA To Host National Young Farmer Conference

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) will host American Farm Bureau's annual Young Farmer and Rancher Leadership Conference, Feb. 8-11 in Philadelphia.

PFA is a voluntary, statewide farm organization which represents 23,049 families and is affiliated with the 3.9-million member American Farm Bureau.

A total of 425 young farmers and ranchers aged 30 and under will be attending from 22 states, including 55 members from Pennsylvania. PFA's participants are being sponsored by 27 county farmers' associations.

Boyd Wolff, Pennsylvania's Secretary of Agriculture, and Keith Eckel, president of PFA, will be among the dignitaries welcoming the young farmers and ranchers to Pennsylvania. Also greeting the group will be Mrs. Beth Laughlin of Lewistown, Mifflin County, chairman of PFA's Young Farmer and Rancher Committee.

Mrs. Laughlin, who has attended two previous conferences, described them as mix of information sessions on timely topics and opportunities for interaction with young farmers from across the country. "You learn as much from meeting other people at the conference as you do from the formal sessions," she said. "It's also a great opportunity to improve your confidence in dealing with a group of that size."

U.S. Congressman Fred Grandy (R-Iowa), will address the group's opening banquet, Saturday, Feb. 8. Also scheduled to address the conference is Dean Kleckner, president of American Farm Bureau.

The conference agenda will feature a balance of fun events such as a 50's style American Bandstand dance and a tour of Pennsylvania Dutch Country, plus the following serious topics: representatives from CEJA — the European Young Farmers' Organization, will review their agricultural philosophy and their view of the progress of the GATT negotiations.

Representatives from the Saxony Rural Youth Organization will discuss the changes taking place in German agriculture since reunification.

Dr. Robert Ahcrin, Agricultural Safety Specialist at the University of Illinois, will discuss what research shows about protecting children from farm accidents.

Lou Sallie, an American Farm Bureau area field service director in the Northeast, will lead a panel discussion on Young Farmer and Rancher ideas which have been successful in other states.

Ann Walsh, director of Action Seminars, Inc., Baton Rouge, LA, will educate participants about how criminals choose victims and what they look for in a target at home, in a car or on the street. She will also discuss how to become less vulnerable, when to fight and when to run.

Tim Buskey, an American Farm Bureau area field service director in the Northeast, and Marleen Bidlack, American Farm Bureau Director of Leadership Development will lead a workshop on improving leadership skills.

Dave Barrett, Counsel of Public Affairs, National Grain and Feed Association, will cover the issue of "When Do You Need Legal Counsel?"

Richard Denison, General Manager of PFA's Members' Service Corporation and manager of PFA's Farm Management Services, will explore the history of farm estate planning, the role that inflation has played in creating estate tax concerns, the tax laws now on the books to help reduce those taxes and the overall objectives a farm family should be exploring.

Patsy Perkins, American Farm Bureau's Director of Employee and Personal Development, will teach seven basic assertive skills to help participants become better communicators.

John S. Niles, founder and president of Global Telematics, Seattle, WA, will discuss case histories of telecommuting and micro-enterprises for off-farm income.

Brad Eckart, American Farm Bureau's Director of Political Education, will cover the opportunities for the farm community in the 1992 elections.

Bob Shepard, American Farm Bureau's Director of Human Resources Development, will discuss how official Washington works, thinks and operates.

N.J. Hort Society Honors Growers

CLAYTON, N.J. — The 1992 Outstanding Grower Award was presented to Douglas Zee of Gloucester County at the Tri-State Horticultural Meeting Banquet in Hershey, Pa. recently.

In presenting the award to Zee, Bob Best Jr., president of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, said Zee is being presented this award because of his accomplishments as a grower and marketer of peaches, and his leadership in the Horticultural Society, the fruit industry, and agriculture.

Zee will join the Fruit Growers Hall of Fame and receive lifetime membership and privileges of the society.

Zee is president of Zee Orchards in Glassboro, N.J. and along with his sons, Doug, Jr., Michael, and Theodore, own and operate 500 acres of peaches, nectarines, and apples in Gloucester County.

Zee, who refers to himself as a peach grower who has apples, has been involved in growing and marketing fruit for 40 years on the Zee family farm. Zee Orchards has been an innovative operation in the utilization of farming practices such as concentrate spraying, integrated pest management, peach variety evaluation and development, and mechanical pruning and thinning.

Best said, "Doug has excelled in the promotion and marketing of peaches. As a grower who markets all of his own fruit, Doug originated the famous JerZee labels with his colorful boxes and advertising logos. The Zees develop and operate one of New Jersey's most efficient and modern peach packing plants.

Zee was cited for his work with the National Peach Council for 25 years as a director, which culminated in his ascension to the presidency in 1980. He was a longtime director and president of the New Jersey Peach Promotion Council.

Accurate and precise in no-till fields, too.

New Idea 9000 series planters have gained a well-deserved reputation for planting with incredibly accurate spacing at precisely the right depth in min-till, no-till or conventionally tilled fields. Our short 18" aerodynamically designed seed drop and independently acting walking beam gauge wheels see to it.

And our low-pressure, air metering system and edge drop seed disc singulates seeds—corn, soybeans, cotton, sorghum, milo, sweet corn, popcorn, sugar beets—to avoid doubles or skips.

Best of all, our double bar model provides plenty of weight and room for many combinations of our numerous no-till coulters and other attachments.

The Flannery's 94-cow Holstein herd (one-third registered) is currently producing 21,000 lbs. milk with a 3.67 test. Milking is done in a new double six parallel parlor.

Cows are fed a total mixed ration. The 325 acres of cropland provide most of the feed. Corn stalklage is stored in one of the five Harvestore structures. A 6214 Slurrystore System provides six months manure storage.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Home.

For every one of us, that word evokes a very personal, very intense, flood of images and memories.

Home. It was the carrot-at-the-end-of-the-stick stretching ahead on a recent, late-night return from a distant meeting.

There's something about heading home that rejuvenates the spirit - at least it does for me. Or maybe some of the rejuvenation at this particular late night hour was the thin layer of ice that coated my car. While the motor began warming, I unearthed a scraper from beneath the driver's seat to scratch some visibility into the frosted coating of the car's glass. Mental and physical preoccupation with frost removal effectively helped block out the biting chill of the icy, sub-freezing air.

A half-mile down the four-lane, the welcome warm air from the heater began nudging the car's interior chill into a more temperature environment... My frigid toes relaxed on the gas pedal and even the steering wheel felt less refrigerator-like to fingers curled around its smooth plastic. With a quick twist of the dial, the sounds of our favorite local country station flooded the warming interior with familiar lyrics paying tribute to . . . going home.

How appropriate.

Overhead the January sky was clear and black, an inky backdrop for the constellations telltaling a winter's night. Though my astronomy knowledge is limited to what our son passed on during his fifth grade studies of the heavens, I spotted the stars of Orion the hunter twinkling high overhead.

Orion nightly makes a pass over the farm, his star-marked shape stalking over the horizon of the contoured fields in early evening. Spotting those familiar stars hovering over the highway was a feeling akin to a wave from a friendly neighbor.

No wonder the ancients paid tribute as they did to signs in the skies, repeating, returning heavenly appearances marking their lives into orderly and dependable segments. Seeing familiar stars overhead offers a stability and order amid constant change or strange terrain.

Landmarks put here by mere humans, eons later, similarly enhance the feeling of order. Of home.

Like the farms of friends dotted here and there along the journey, havens of shelter and safety I know I could seek out if help was needed for some reason.

Or like the bright-lit, late-night glow from 24-hour service stations and convenience stores along the way, each a small oasis for fulfilling physical needs and the emotional reassurance of other humans nearby.

I recall an instance related by my parents that occurred on a trip West they made some time ago. Taking to the highway, long before daylight one morning, they traversed a section of stark, isolated prairie. Not a house, not a farm, not even the white, circular glow of a distant nightlight broke the empty void of blackness beyond their headlights.

"Eerie," my mother later described it, with visible distaste.

And so, I rejoice in the car's cozy warmth and steady motor hum, the passage of numbered interstate exits counting down to my destination, and the bright-light spots marking humankind existence.

Home.

Nightlights send long shadows over opposite ends of the dairy barns and shop areas. A steady red glow within the milkhouse denotes that the milk cooling system is functioning. The garage door is open and awaiting my final exit off the paved passageway. Overhead on the front porch, a light marks the final steps. All quiet. All peaceful. All normal.

Inside, woodstove warmth wraps around my weariness and the cat stretches from her nest, an afghan-cushioned hollow in the beanbag chair.

I can hear the farmer softly snoring from upstairs.

Home.

Most appreciated only after you've left it for a little.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Franklin 4-H Beef

The Franklin County 4-H Beef Club held their annual reorganization meeting January 23.

David Sheiss was elected president; Daren Statler, vice president; Karen Eshleman, secretary; and Lorinda Hawbaker, treasurer.

Leon Lebo will continue as club leader and Gary Meyers will be project leader. Meyers shared feeding and caring tips for 4-H steers with the members.

Seven new members joined the club this year. Our membership has been on the decline the past several years, so new members are encouraged to join.

HOW TO TAKE CARE OF STAINLESS STEEL COOKWARE

Cookware made from stainless steel is both durable and scratch resistant. With proper care, stainless pots and pans will retain their beauty and high performance features for many years.

For everyday maintenance, wash the cookware in warm, soapy water and rinse with clean water. To prevent water spots, dry thoroughly with a soft, clean towel. If desired, stainless steel cookware can be cleaned in an automatic dishwasher. To avoid discoloration, do not let food deposits, particularly those with a fat or salt content, sit in the cookware overnight. Whether cooking or cleaning, be careful to avoid sudden temperature changes. They may warp the metal, Let the pan cool before cleaning. When cooking, never place hot water into a cold pan. Cook over a medium or a low heat setting. In addition to wasting energy, high heat settings may stain the metal and burn food.

If food does burn or stick to the pan, allow it to cool, then fill the pan with water until all the food residue is covered. Add about 1/4 to 1/2 cup baking soda (depending on how much water you used). Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Remove the pan from heat. Once the water has cooled, loosen the food particles with a rubber scraper, then pour the water out. To remove the remaining stains, scrub with a thick paste of a few drops of water and a stainless steel cleanser applied to a tightly folded paper towel. Rinse the pan thoroughly and dry with a soft towel.

If stainless steel is used for frozen vegetables, white spots may appear. The culprits are the salts and preservatives used in the freezing process. To remove the spots, moisten a paper towel with a generous amount of white vinegar and rub vigorously or apply a stainless steel cleanser.

PLAN FOR NUTRITIOUS SNACKS

Regardless of your age, nutritious snacks planned as part of the day's food can be important in meeting nutrient needs. Small children need snacks because they can eat only small amounts of food at each meal. Mid-morning and mid-afternoon snacks help them get the protein, vitamins, minerals, and calories their growing bodies need.

Teenagers may need snacks. Their nutrient and calorie requirements are high because they are growing rapidly and are physically active.

Adults may need snacks to supply nutrients they miss when regular meals lose out to a busy schedule.

Choose snacks that provide dietary fiber as well as other nutrients. Fresh fruits with edible seeds (berries) or skins (apples, nectarines). Dried fruits, raw vegetables, and whole-grain breads or crackers (whole-wheat, rye) are good sources of dietary fiber.

Cathy Gro's Crosstitching Earns 'Best Of Show'

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.)—"Nothing looks the same until you backstitch in black to outline. It really brings it to life. That's what sets it apart."

That's how Susan Gro describes the finishing touch her 15-year-old daughter Cathy made to a 17½ "x19" counted cross-stitch picture that won her "Best of Show" in its division at the Farm Show in January.

Cathy Gro, daughter of Dale and Susan Gro of McVeytown, entered her "Rose of Sharon" cross-stitch picture, a Victorian porch scene overlooking a farm. On the porch, a rocker draped with a quilt faces a washstand on which sits a basket and pitcher filled with roses.

The peaceful scene intricately weaves over 55 different colors of floss for effect. Those unfamiliar with counted cross-stitch may not realize that to form her picture, Cathy started with a blank piece of linen.

Other kinds of needlepoint, such as cross-stitch and embroidery, come with the picture or pattern already printed on the item, a pillowcase, for example. Then one follows the line accordingly.

But in counted cross-stitch, the pattern is in a booklet describing types of stitches, colors of floss, and placement of both.

Cathy folded her cross-stitch material in half two ways to find the center and then, she started counting!

"You find your center, then count up, and start in the corner," Cathy says.

The winning "Rose of Sharon" picture was done on 28-count needlepoint linen and Cathy formed the individual stitch, an "X", by crossing over a couple of threads on the linen to include two holes rather than one. Cross-stitch linen does come in higher numbers, such as 32-count, but as Susan explains, "You really have to have excellent eyes to see that!"

As for thread, Cathy used two strands at one time to form the "X's." All six strand embroidery floss is separated to two strands each. Backstitching with a single strand of black floss outlines and accents the features in the picture, bringing it to life.

Cross-stitchers must also take care to form all of the stitches the same way. This guarantees uniformity and neatness.

The level of work Cathy does requires perfection, persistence, and patience -- all of which are tested when a mistake is found.

By counting wrong, the whole picture can be thrown out of proportion. Cathy's 4-H cross-stitch leader, her mother, emphasizes that dealing with mistakes is all part of the process of learning.

"If you want to do it right, you have to do that (rip out that mistakes). It's a good lesson that most kids have to learn. It has to be correct or it doesn't look right."

Along with perfection, persistence, and patience, comes planning. "I started the 'Rose of Sharon' the first week of January and finished it the week before our own 4-H fair in August," Cathy states. It also means that her project for next year has already been started.

In "Friendship Quilts," Cathy creates a similar porch scene with a rocker and quilt, but there will be differences in the stitching. Cathy explains, "Next year's project is only 18-count, while this year's is 28-count. I had to cross two holes to make one stitch. The "Friendship Quilt" isn't quite as difficult in that sense because each hole makes a stitch -- there's no skipping holes. But now, this next project, I'll use only one thread rather than two."

While living with your 4-H leader is convenient, both Susan and Cathy appreciate the "Kountry Stitchin'" store only a few miles away. Owner Phyllis Sunderland's store caters to cross-stitchers, providing instruction booklets, supplies, and framing services, with discounts to 4-H'ers.

Cathy began her experience with cross-stitch by watching her mother. "I picked up cross-stitch myself," Susan explains. "One day Cathy sat down and asked if I would show her how.

"She did a small picture of a bunny and then got a few kits and did them. Then she ordered a cross-stitch project out of a magazine as her first 4-H project -- a garden scene.

"Last year she entered the 'General Store,' a solid picture with no gaps of fabric where there are no stitches. This year's project has a lot of background showing through."

Although practice taught Cathy the "in's and out's" of cross-stitching, she also learned the ups and downs of entering shows such as the Farm Show.

"A lot of people are afraid to enter (the Farm Show). Everyone thinks the competition is too tough, so they don't enter," Cathy states.

But Cathy knows, from experience, that the placing or ribbon an item receives depends a lot on who is doing the judging.

Cathy had previously entered her "Best of Show" picture in the open classes at four other fairs and won a first place, a second place, a "Best of Show", and believe it or not, no placement at all.

Susan elaborates, "I would like to see that the judge would be someone that knows what to look for in cross-stitch -- that the stitches are even, that the crosses all go the same way, that the work surface is clean (white material). It's easy to get the material smudged during the summer months."

But no one knows how they will place if they don't enter. "Don't be afraid to enter," Cathy urges. "Everyone thinks the competition is too tough, so they don't enter. You don't have to be exceptional to enter it (the Farm Show)."

To enter the Farm Show, or the open show of other fairs, contact your local extension office. "Basically all you have to do is go to the extension office and get a book. Look up where your division would be," Susan explains.

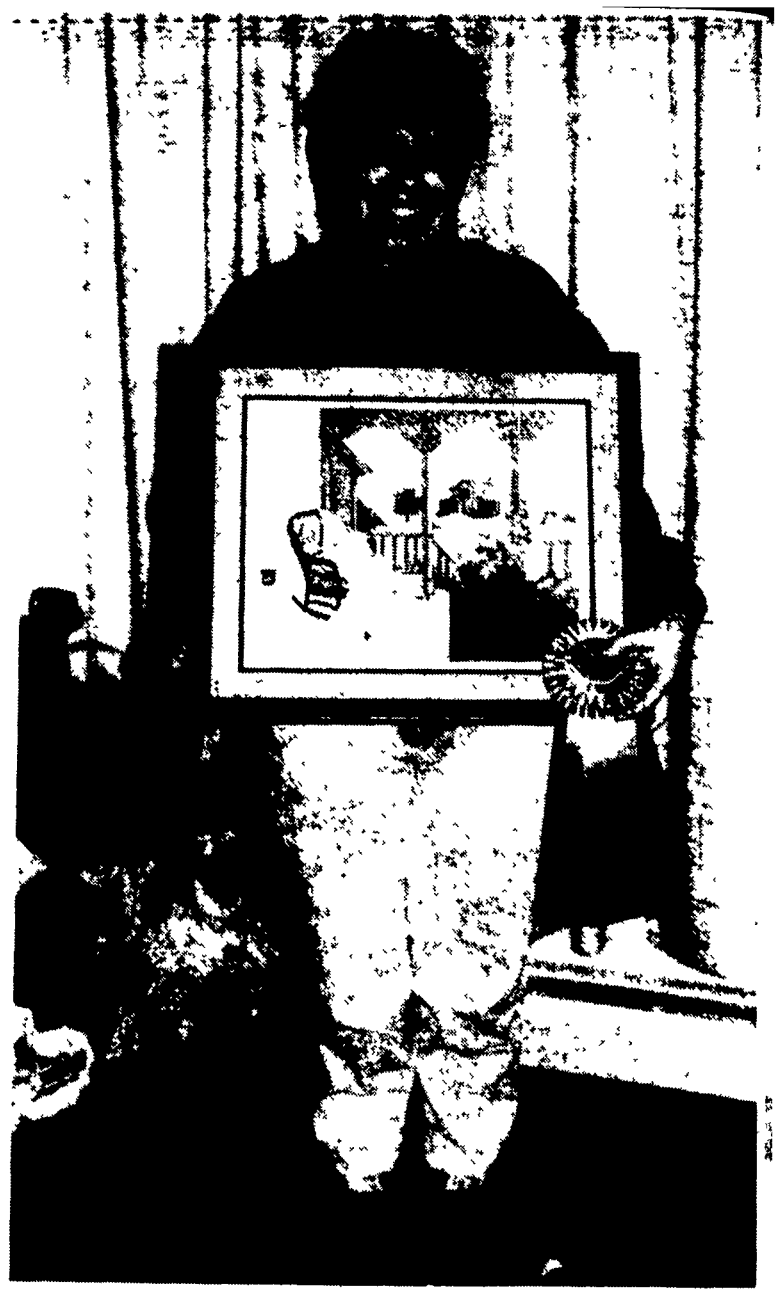
"Cathy entered the open class. When it comes time to enter, let the extension office know, package your entry, and fill out the forms and entry tag. A gentleman from Juniata County took hers to the Farm Show and Dave Filson (Mifflin County's Extension Agent) brought it back."

Cathy's picture won first in the Skill and Needlepoint division and placed "Best of Show" among five divisions including Skill and Needlepoint, Recycling and Remodeling, Basketry, Child Care, and Household Science Experiments.

It was entered on Thursday, judged Friday, and the Gro's saw it Monday as part of a special "Best of Show" display from all the categories.

"I didn't kow if I could accomplish that or not because I didn't know what my competition would be. Some were cross-stitch pictures, others were sweatshirts, bookmarks, and towels. I'm going to enter again and see how I do," Cathy says.

Cathy's experience in entering fairs has taught her to do her best, enter her project, then see what happens. Add to this a dash of competitiveness, a bit of training, and some hard-earned experience, and out comes a proven formula for success.



This 17½ "x19" counted cross-stitch "Rose of Sharon" picture won "Best of Show" for Cathy Gro of McVeytown at the Farm Show in January.

She started working on this 4-H and Farm Show project last January. She used 55 different colors of floss on 28-count linen.

Wasting no time, Cathy Gro starts another counted cross-stitch project for 4-H.

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

As the winter months are upon us, most of us doing the cooking try to think of nice little snacks that would go along with the season. As the snow flies and the winds blow, a nice cup of tea or hot chocolate, along with a hot muffin, would help us feel good, not only at breakfast but for after sledding or a snack in the evening. Here are some fast but nutritious muffin recipes. Just whip them up and bake them for a short time, and your snack is ready to eat.

Oatmeal Muffins

½ cup quick cooking oats
½ cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup packed brown sugar
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
½ cup buttermilk
1 egg
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
½ cup chopped cranberries or apple
Custard cups: 10 (6 oz.) custard cups
Time at High (each batch of 5) 1¾ to 2¼ minutes

In a medium bowl, combine oats, flour, brown sugar, baking powder, baking soda, salt and pumpkin pie spice. Mix well. In a measuring cup, beat buttermilk, egg and oil until frothy. Make a well in center of dry ingredients. Pour egg mixture into well. Quickly stir just until flour and oats are moistened. Batter will be lumpy. Fold in cranberries or apple. Fill paper bake cups in 6-ounce custard cups no more than half full, using about 2 tablespoons batter for each. Arrange the custard cups in a ring in microwave oven. Microwave 5 at a time at full power (High) for 1¾ to 2¼ minutes or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Rearrange cups once during cooking. Edges of muffins may still look moist when muffins are done. Remove from cups. Repeat with any remaining batter.

Gingerbread Muffins

1 cup all purpose flour
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground allspice
⅓ cup milk
1 egg
⅓ cup molasses
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
Custard cups
Time at High (each batch of 5) 2 minutes

In a medium bowl, combine flour, sugar, baking powder, cinnamon, ginger, baking soda, salt and allspice. Mix well. In a measuring cup, beat milk, egg, molasses and oil until frothy. Make a well in center of dry ingredients. Pour egg mixture into well. Quickly stir until flour is moistened. Fill paper bake cups in 6-ounce custard cups no more than half full. Arrange cups in a ring in microwave oven. Microwave 5 at a time at full power (High) for 2 minutes or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Rearrange cups once during cooking. Edges of muffins may still look moist when muffins are done. Remove from cups. Repeat with any remaining batter. Serve warm with soft cream cheese with honey.

White Chocolate Berry Pie

10-inch pie shell made with the recipe below
1½ cups milk
6 cups miniature marshmallows
8 ounces white chocolate
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 cups frozen whipped topping
2 cups fresh blueberries or raspberries
Pie plate
Bowl - 3 quart
Time at High - 8 minutes
Refrigerate - 1¼ hours

Prepare crumb crust with chocolate wafers; set aside. In a bowl combine milk, miniature marshmallows and white chocolate. Microwave at full power (High) for 8 minutes or until chocolate and marshmallows melt, stirring four times. Stir in vanilla. Refrigerate for 1 hour or until mixture is thoroughly cooled, stirring twice. Whisk in whipped topping in 2 batches. Spoon ⅓ of filling into crumb crust. Top with blueberries or raspberries. Then add the remaining filling. Refrigerate 8 hours or overnight. Serve topped with additional fresh blueberries or raspberries.

Basic Crumb Pie Crust

½ cup butter
2 cups fine graham cracker, vanilla or chocolate wafer crumbs
¼ cup sugar
Pie plate - 10 inch
Bowl - 2 quart
Time at High (butter) 1 to 1¼ minutes
Time at High (crust) 2 to 2½ minutes

Lightly butter a pie plate. Place butter in a bowl. Microwave at full power (High) for 1¼ minutes. Stir in cracker, wafer or cookie crumbs and sugar until all crumbs are moistened. Spoon crumb mixture over bottom and sides of pie plate. Press crumbs firmly over bottom and sides of pie plate. Microwave at full power (High) for 2 to 2½ minutes, giving dish a half turn once. Using back of spoon, quickly press crumbs firmly against pie plate again. Cool before filling.

CHELATION THERAPY

THIS MAY BE YOUR ANSWER TO: Heart Problems, High Blood Pressure, Poor Circulation, Arthritis, Diabetes, Leg Cramps, Numbness, Tingling, Cold Hands And Feet & Atherosclerosis.

Dear Golden Pride:

A year ago this past February I started taking Golden Pride's FORMULAS FOR HEALTH. A friend was taking Formula 1 and 2 for his arthritis and it was helping him...so seeing is believing! I had arthritis so bad I could hardly walk even with the use of a cane. After starting on the program I attended a Golden Pride Opportunity Meeting but I had to walk using my cane. In three weeks time, there was so much improvement that I walked into the next meeting without my cane! I can still remember your expression when you saw me!

I also had high blood pressure for many years. Even though I was taking medicine my B/P was still 220/100-120 to 200/100. If it was 180-190/90, I thought I was doing good. My blood pressure is now normal, 120-130/68-70. My doctor couldn't believe how my blood pressure had dropped after being so high for so many years but said to keep on doing what I was doing!! Plus, my arthritis is gone!

I am also a diabetic and have been on medication but until starting the program, my blood sugar was extremely high and unstable. Now it's stable and much lower, 90-120. Also, due to my diabetic condition, the doctor said that the vessels in my eyes were so bad that not even stronger glasses would improve my eyesight. He said that nothing could be done! I recently went for an eye exam and he now says that my eyes are healthy and even gave me a prescription for new glasses!

I also had two clogged arteries in my neck (one on each side). Now, the blood is flowing freely through both arteries... my triglyceride and cholesterol levels were elevated and now my triglycerides are normal and my cholesterol has dropped from 330 to below 240!

I also suffered from kidney stones at least once a year. Since being on FORMULAS FOR HEALTH, I haven't had one kidney stone! All I have to complain about now is gallstones. However, I feel that in time I won't have this problem either.

I have dropped 20 dress sizes and have lost 50 pounds With Bee Perfect, Formula 5, I expect to lose 50 more pounds. The Bee Perfect drink is delicious and keeps me from being hungry. I have tried many weight loss programs, but this is the only one that has been successful.

As you can see, I was in the worst health possible before starting on the FORMULAS FOR HEALTH program. Now, thanks to Golden Pride, FORMULAS FOR HEALTH... It is a joy to tell everyone about what the program has done for me and my husband. I highly recommend this program to anyone who wants to celebrate life instead of sitting around and watching life pass them by.

Recipes That Say 'Be My Valentine'

Sharing sweets with loved ones on Valentine's Day is a long-standing tradition. If you want to do something for your Valentine that will be appreciated beyond that one special day, try making some of these recipes.

NO-CRUST CHEESE PIE

2 8-oz. pkgs. Philadelphia cream cheese
⅔ cup granulated sugar
3 large eggs
½ teaspoon vanilla

Have the cream cheese at room temperature or unwrap and place in a microwave-proof, two-quart bowl and place in microwave on Defrost (power level 3) for two minutes. Blend cream cheese, sugar, eggs and vanilla until smooth and pour into 9-inch glass pie plate. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes, or until puffed up and light brown on the edges. Remove from oven and cool at room temperature for 20 minutes and then cover with the following mixture.

½ pint sour cream
3 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Place pie back in 350-degree oven and bake for 15 to 20 minutes. Cool and place in refrigerator until ready to serve. For an added touch for Valentine's Day, and after pie is cool, top with a can of cherry pie filling.

HALF-HEARTED VALENTINE COOKIES

¾ cup sugar
1 cup butter, softened
3-ounces cream cheese, softened
1 egg
1 teaspoon peppermint extract
3 cups flour

Glaze:

1 cup semi-sweet real chocolate chips
¼ cup butter

In large mixing bowl, combine all cookie ingredients except flour. Beat at medium speed, scraping bowl often, until light and fluffy. Add flour; beat until mixed. Wrap dough in waxed paper and refrigerate until firm, at least 2 hours.

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Roll out dough on lightly floured surface to ¼ -inch thickness. Cut out with heart-shaped cookie cutter. Place 1-inch apart on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake for 7 to 10 minutes or until edges are very lightly browned. Remove immediately; cool completely.

For glaze, in small saucepan, melt chocolate chips and butter, stirring occasionally, over low heat until melted. Dip half of each heart into chocolate. Refrigerate on waxed paper-lined cookie sheets until glaze is firm. Store covered in the refrigerator. Makes about 3½ dozen.

1 cup ground almonds
½ cup sugar
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Dash salt
¾ cup cold butter, cut into pieces
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Apricot filling:

⅓ cup chopped dried apricots
¼ cup apricot or peach liqueur
¼ cup fresh orange juice
12-ounce jar apricot preserves

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. For crust, place flour, almonds, sugar, cocoa, cinnamon, and salt in work bowl of food processor. Add butter; cover. Process until crumbly. Add egg yolks and vanilla. Process until dough forms. Refrigerate ⅓ of dough. Press remaining dough evenly onto bottom and up sides of 10½ -inch round or heart-shaped tart pan. Bake 15 minutes. Remove from oven and let cool.

Inexpensive Ways to Say "I Love You!"

Next weekend my husband and I are hosting a sleep-over for our nephews and nieces so that their parents can have Valentines Day alone. Each child is receiving an invitation, and they must bring a homemade valentine for us in order to be admitted to the party.

It should be fun. (I'm also hoping it will be an enjoyable break for their parents!)

These are two of the efforts we're taking to keep the commercialism out of the approaching holiday. It is especially important to think of inexpensive ways to say "I love you!" when family budgets are already stretched to the hilt!

Choosing inexpensive ways to celebrate forces us to be creative. Your friends who are dieting may actually be relieved when you think of an alternative to the traditional box of fudge.

If you need a few hints to get your thinking started, read this list and think how you could change one so that it would truly be a message of love that only you could send to another special person in your life.

♥ Make a coupon book for free hugs. You may want to specialize several for times like, "redeem for one free hug when you've had a long day" or "redeem for a free hug before taking an exam". Make sure you include plenty that say, "One free hug, redeemable at any time. No expiration date!"

♥ Create a Valentine that lists household chores that you are willing to do for the recipient upon request. You may include laundry, snow removal, washing dishes, polishing shoes, scraping ice off another's windshield.

♥ Make someone a cup of hot chocolate or herb tea after a long day without being asked. As you deliver it, don't forget to whisper, "I love you!"

♥ Nestle sample lotions, cosmetics, or aftershaves in a box with tissue paper. Children can decorate the outside of the box with construction paper hearts.

♥ Write a list of the things you like about your spouse, child or special friend. One year, I made a photo-copy of a February calendar and wrote these items on it, one for each day. Use red pens to make it more festive. Roll the paper, and tie it with curling ribbon.

♥ Light candles and play soft music during dinner. Make place cards for each person out of red and white construction paper.

♥ Record a tape of songs that hold special memories for you and your loved one.

♥ Make homemade valentines from construction paper or reused gift wrap. Inscribe each with a personalized verse.

♥ Pay for a babysitter, so you and your spouse can have a night alone.

♥ Send messages to your love with your eyes. Flirt; share private thoughts; give each other sexy looks. Like nothing else, this makes a person feel adored.

♥ Take a walk together. Walk slowly and hold hands. Choose a special destination, maybe an ice cream shop or a hill where you can watch the sunset.

♥ Plan an indoor picnic. Spread a favorite blanket or cloth on the floor of your living room or bedroom floor. Get out some champagne glasses and make toasts to each other's happiness. You can serve iced water with a slice of lemon. Dine on slices of cheese, assorted crackers, and fresh fruit. If children are included, you may want to choose the kitchen floor and a slightly different menu. They will love the anticipation of festivities! You could use cookies cutters to cut sandwich breads in the shape of hearts.

Valentines Day is one day during the year that is set aside for special celebrations of love. Take time during the next week to create a present or activity that is filled with memories and personal touches. These are gifts that will warm the heart and not break the wallet. It's a matter of taking time.

Youth Wins Computer In Program

CHICAGO, Ill. — Restaurant operators around the country are paying more and more attention to customers such as Annie Clark and the thousands of young consumers like her who are influencing the dining selections of their parents.

Clark, a 7-year-old resident of Blackhawk, S.D., is the winner of a Macintosh computer, the grand prize in the checkoff-funded "Be A Star With Beef" sweepstakes. She entered through the Millstone restaurant in Rapid City, S.D. — her favorite family dining choice.

National Restaurant Association (NRA) surveys indicate that 50 percent of parents are greatly influenced by children in choosing a specific restaurant.

The "Be A Star" promotion has run in family-style independent and chain restaurants, beginning last spring. More than 300,000 activity packs, designed to entertain young diners while they wait for their food, have been distributed to children, ages 4-10, through the promotion. Sweepstakes entry blanks were included in each kit, with more than 2,000 children entering the sweepstakes.

"The 'Be A Star' promotion already has been successful in increasing beef sales," said Rose Paulson, a South Dakota beef producer and chairman of the Beef Industry Council (BIC) foodservice subcommittee. "We've heard from restaurant operators who say their family business has increased by more than 12 percent as a result of the promotion. In addition, more than half of the participating restaurant operators say they plan to keep at least one of the kids' beef items on their menu permanently, which provides many long-range opportunities to feature beef."

Some operators also created children's beef promotions based on "Be A Star" materials, including food sampling, coloring sheets, giveaways and restaurant tours.

In addition to occupying young diners' time, the "Be A Star" promotion provides educational information — on subjects including nutrition, the four food groups, and the importance of beef in a healthy diet — that can help build the foundation for the beef customers of tomorrow.

The number of children eating in restaurants increased 36 percent since 1982 — more than twice the rate of adult diners — according to NRA statistics. Kids, ages 6-17, now account for eight percent of traffic in full-service, family-style restaurants. That number is expected to rise by more than six percent in the next five years.

ANSWER Eva Burrell, Glen Gardner, N.J., requested help with the recipe called Believe It or Not Bouncing Snowball Bouquet. Thanks to Shirley Wartzenluft, Robesonia, and to Miriam DeLong, Quarryville, for sending the same recipe that Miriam said she has often made and it does work. "It's quite a conversation piece," she wrote.

Dancing Moth Balls

Fill a rose bowl, or any clear bowl with a curved surface, with water. Add one teaspoon baking soda, one teaspoon citric acid crystals, and three to five mothballs for each cup water.

The chemical reaction will keep the moth balls moving from the surface of the water to the bottom of the bowl and back for about two hours.

If you place the bowl on a mirror, you will get twice the effect. The water can be colored with food coloring or a flower can be floated on top.

Some people anchor the flower to the bottom of the bowl with a tiny, needle-type flower holder, a bit of adhesive or modeling clay.

When the balls stop moving, add another spoonful of citric acid crystals and baking soda to start them again.

Attract Birds To Garden Area

Terry L. Maddox

Earlier this season, a number of gardeners expressed concern over the lack of birds. Friends who study birds in the area suggest many common species have been late to arrive because snow has been late this year. With adequate supplies of food and seeds, the birds didn't need to rely on our feeders until natural supplies had been exhausted or covered.

Most of my bird observations come from our backyard feeder and brief trips into the woods, and I have noticed that as the trees and shrubs in my garden became larger, so did the variety and number of birds.

The two most frequently visited plants are a group of Meyer Lilac and several Spreading Cotoneasters. Neither of these plants retain any fruit at this time of year. I suspect that the dense and twiggy nature of these plants attract the birds during feeding hours since both plants are near our feeder.

While the fruit on certain plants does serve as food for birds, it is a short-term item and either drops from the plant or is consumed quickiy. A plant's greatest value to birds is the protection it provides during the winter.

Before birds will take advantage of your feeders, they need to feel secure in the area, which can be provided by the twigs and branches of trees and shrubs. If you find that your feeder is not being visited as frequently as you would like, consider planting a variety of shrubs on your property. Plants close to your feeder will also help reduce the time birds need to move from their cover to the food. Plants with a dense habit of growth will probably offer the best cover to the birds.

Lilac and cotoneaster and plants such as privet, firethorn, barberry, honeysuckle, mockorange and viburnum are generally full enough to supply many perches for the birds. Most of these plants also have interesting fruit that will attract specific bird species in the fall.

You don't have to redesign your whole landscape to attract birds — adding several plants will be an effective first move. A simple plant grouping along the side of the house, off the corner of the patio or along the property border will work. If you want to have additional privacy between you and other properties, border plantings would benefit both you and your bird population.

Before the spring planting season arrives, why not think about possible sites in your garden where you can add bird cover. Fruiting species will benefit you and your birds.

A rangy Texas longhorn draws heavy bidding at a Nebraska auction. The beef-of-the-day in the 1880s, the strong-willed beasts were ideal for the unsupervised stock-raising of the time. With fences came more docile British breeds, along with a war of nerves and bullets between ranchers and homesteaders.

Longhorns Come Back

Pat Durkin
National Geographic
News Service

MOUNTAIN HOME, TEXAS — Cowboy Jim Murff spends hours alone on the range, but the solitude rarely gets to him. A herd of softly snorting Texas longhorns provides all the company he needs.

"They have more heart than most people," says Murff, who manages 1,300 head for the sprawling YO Ranch in central Texas. "I like the idea that I'm reliving a part of the Old West."

Longhorns, known for their scrappy temperament, boxy haunches, sweeping hours and starring role in America's cowboy past, were almost extinct by the end of the 19th century. But 100 years later, health-conscious consumers have created a small but booming new market for the naturally lean breed.

Shoppers, who a decade ago would have considered longhorn beef too dry, now pay an extra $1 a pound or more for "93 percent fat-free longhorn lean" in specialty-food stores. Longhorn steaks, tough as they are, fetch top prices in Texas restaurants.

Longhorn beef will move into wider markets as more of it becomes available, says Steve Mobley, a Dallas printer who started a small herd of longhorns as a sideline five years ago.

Like others who have started longhorn herds, Mobley saw his business grow quickly. He now receives monthly orders for more than 10,000 pounds of longhorn burger, much more than his herd of 300 can supply.

He tries to buy enough from other breeders to satisfy his customers, but he never can fill all the orders. "There's simply not enough longhorn in the nation to supply the demand," Mobley tells National Geographic.

The growing market for longhorn beef has changed the emphasis at the YO Ranch, which began raising longhorns in the 1960s as a tourist attraction. Until a few years ago, the YO's annual longhorn auction attracted mostly gentleman ranchers looking for a few colorful animals to dress up their pastures.

Now the spring sale attracts serious breeders who pay thousands for purebred animals, says Murff. Membership in the Texas Longhorn Breeders Association has grown to more than 4,000 since the organization was founded in 1964.

Still, longhorns won't seriously challenge the traditional beef business anytime soon. It takes years — sometimes decades — to build a herd to any size, says Herbert Meischen, chief marketer for Excell Inc. of Wichita, Kan., one of the largest fresh-beef suppliers in the United States.

The longhorn's probable role in the commercial beef industry will be to supply genes, not numbers, says Meischen, who believes the American market will never fully accept beef as lean as longhorn. Fatter breeds are tenderer and tastier.

The larger cattle industry already uses longhorn bulls to father the firstborn calves of beefier breeds. The smaller half-breeds are easier for young females to deliver.

But longhorn breeders see a growing market for purebred longhorns and a day when most supermarket beef will be a cross between fatter breeds and the leaner longhorns.

The history of longhorns in America began with Columbus, who brought the long-horned Spanish breed to the Caribbean island of Santo Domingo to supply his new colony. Years later, Spanish explorer Gregorio de Villalobos took some of the animals to Mexico.

From there, longhorns spread north, into what is now Texas, with Spanish missionaries. When the missions were abandoned, the animals roamed free.

By the mid-19th century, an estimated 4 million longhorns lived in the Texas scrub, according to J. Frank Dubie, author of "The Longhorns," considered the definitive book on the breed.

Only the hardiest survived. They prevailed over drought, disease and predators. When a calf was in trouble, the herd surrounded it, horns turned outward toward the enemy.

The challenges of the wild shaped the modern Texas longhorns that 19th- century ranchers rounded up, branded and drove hundreds of miles to market. Herds were large, usually 1,500 to 2,000 head, and managed by young cowboys, most of them mere teen-agers.

The cattle-drive era lasted only 20 years, until about 1890. Ranchers then began raising fatter, squatter British breeds and fencing their lands. Longhorn numbers dwindled rapidly.

Congress became concerned and in 1927 ordered a search for purebred longhorns to re-establish the legendary breed.

Two U.S. Forest Service investigators traveled for months, but were able to find only 27 purebreds. The animals were taken as seed stock to Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge in Oklahoma.

Today there are still fewer than 175,000 registered purebred longhorns. But that doesn't worry Jim Murff.

"A lot of people don't want to fool with them, but I do," he says. "There's nothing sweeter than a longhorn."

Mechanization Has Removed 'Heart' Of Tree Care

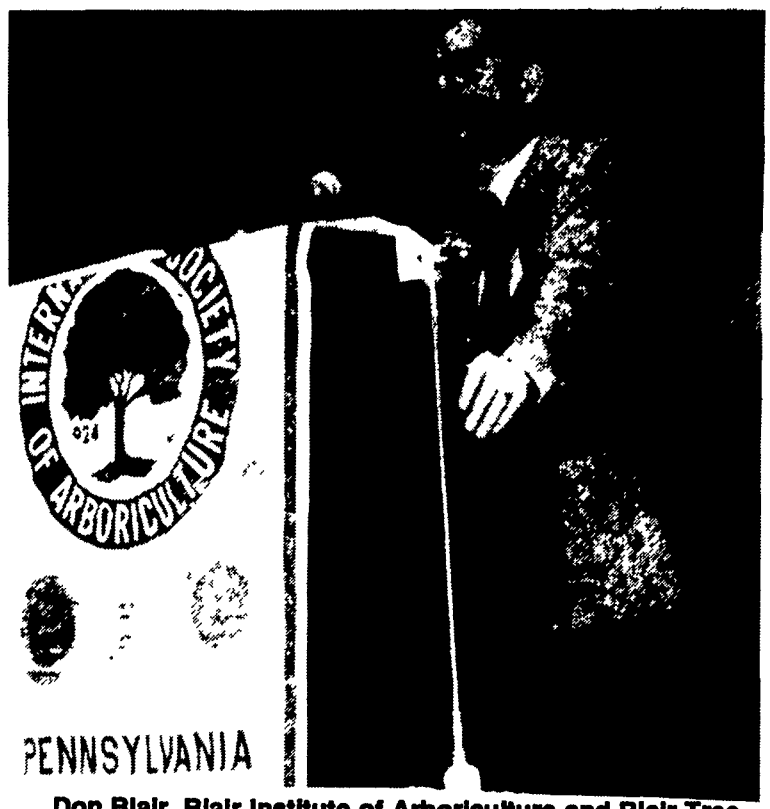
ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Workers should take time to consider the lessons of history in order to make the work of tree care a profession rather than "a schizophrenic industry," said Don Blair, Blair Institute of Arboriculture and Blair Tree Specialists, here recently at the annual Shade Tree Symposium.

Often, the mistakes of the past go forgotten. And the lessons to be learned are lost as the turnover ratio begins to climb in the tree care industry. "People don't stay in it long enough to get a sense of history," he said.

Blair spoke about the "trials and triumphs of 100 years of tree care" on the conference topic, History of Arboriculture. In 1922, his father formed the company, Blair Tree Specialists, in California.

Back then, much was known about what to do with pruning (which has been around as long as we've had fire, said Blair). And even though research and discovery about correct methods of tree care are often transfered from generation to generation, much gets lost on the way.



Don Blair, Blair Institute of Arboriculture and Blair Tree Specialists, spoke about the "trials and triumphs of 100 years of tree care" on the tree symposium conference topic, History of Arboriculture.

For those who want to diagnose tree problems, the first thing to do would be to "look up," said Bob McMullin, Keystone Tree Experts, at a session entitled "Steps In Diagnosing Tree and Shrub Problems."

It was the intent of the International Society of Arboriculture (ISA), begun in 1924, that pointed the way to collecting information about tree care. (The annual Shade Tree Symposium is a gathering of the Penn-Del Chapter, begun in 1960, of the International Society of Arboriculture.)

In the speech, Blair related details of the development of techniques and technology through the ages. One, the development of the Mull chain in 1945, actually took out the heart of individualized tree care and paved the way for the incorrect technique called shearing.

And the advent of the bucket truck "has taken out the heart and soul of the business," he said. "There is no heart anymore in what people are doing."

In the past, contractors would send hired help out "in order to get something for the men to do," he said, and have them shear off the tops of trees. Many trees were destroyed in the process.

The future value of a tree depends on the manor of pruning, said Blair, not "unskillful or injudicious pruning."

Bill Thomas, Longwood Gardens, spoke about alternative variety selection ("Selecting Conifers For the Landscape") for arborists at the tree symposium.

In the past, the ideas of tree painting and cavity repair flourished, but are frowned upon greatly by the industry today.

In addition, the technology has improved. Now, the triple-edged super-sharp cutting tooth "has given us a new appreciation for the pruning saw."

Also, the activities of the past were quite alarming compared to what is being done today. His father, he said, often would carry dynamite, available from any hardware store of the 1920s or 1930s, and "blow up" holes for tree insertion. Explosive was also used to remove tree stumps.

In one example, his father "rigged and rigged . . . and taped 2,000 holes with dynamite" to blast for trees, he said. "No one worred about explosives to destroy property. We were just doing our job.

"And my dad was gassed six times in World War I, so spraying didn't look too bad to him," said Blair.

At that time, his father wrote a book, and part of the book detailed the sensitivity of plant life — a section which was removed from the book "because it was too controversial at the time," said Blair.

The Blair family, which has been a member of the California Arborists Association since 1934, are working with the ISA in forming a museum.

"Not the 'old chainsaw' museum, but an arborist museum," he said. "We are looking for old photos of the work of the people, histories, library files of the time, old catalogs of tree equipment. . . ."

For those who want to diagnose tree problems, the first thing to do would be to "look up," said Bob McMullin, Keystone Tree Experts, at a session entitled "Steps In Diagnosing Tree and Shrub Problems."

The 'too' problem is what causes most of the problems with tree care, and it's too little knowledge of what workers are doing that McMullin points to in his experience.

"About 75 percent of the problems I'm asked to look at involve the wrong tree in the wrong place," he said. Many trees are

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

On a cold, cold Saturday morning, Allen and I bundled up in several layers of clothes and joined a group at Chickies Rock near Columbia, Pa. There were about 30 folks on the tour of Susquehanna River Overlooks and we were all dressed for the temperature that didn't go above 20 degrees all day. Only our faces suffered from the river breeze.

There are seven overlooks that are open to the public throughout the year. The inspiring vistas in Lancaster County include wooded river hills and bird migrations. Speaking of which we were lucky enough to see three bald eagles. I'm glad that Allen had taken his binoculars along so that we could see their coloring as they soared high overhead. There were swans on the river too. But, one of the sights that I'll remember are the gulls. I really can't adequately describe the thousands of white birds that looked like a snow flurry as they hunted for fish. We were told by our guide that they catch small fish that come through the dam's tailrace.

We saw both Safe Harbor Dam and the Holtwood Dam from lookouts high above the river. Some places are accessible only by long foot paths while others can be reached by vehicle on gravel driveways.

Of the 18 cars that started on the trip there were only 12 remaining by the time that we reached Face Rock Overlook, owned by Pa. Power & Light Co., to view Holtwood Dam. The last stop going south was Susquehannock State Park but we also started for home as we had already been there.

It is a trip that I'd like to repeat in the fall to see the colorful autumn leaves.

planted "for instant impact," and those who plant the trees do not consider if the tree is right for the area.

Those who have the 'too' problems, including soil that is too wet, planting too deep, using too much mulch, soil conditions that are too cold, or too many plants placed together "don't know what's going on."

Many of the problems stem from using too much mulch. "I don't know why this is occuring, except maybe to sell more mulch," he said.

McMullin said that we overlook the simple things that are there, such as synthetic burlap or twine that engulf the trunk and root system of the tree that's been planted; planting huge root trees such as poplars too close to buildings (McMullin said poplars should not be used unless they are "completely away from buildings"); uprooting of parts of the tree root system and consequent dying back of the upper leaves; planting ewes in areas of poor drainage; and other problems.

The first thing is to find out whether the symptoms are caused by man or by nature. Some problems are caused by nature and others are man-made (mice and rodents are considered man-made problems).

"The number 1 'too' problem, 'too little knowledge,'" he said, "is the same as being 'too stupid.'"

Also speaking at the symposium was Bill Thomas, Longwood Gardens, who spoke about alternative variety selection ("Selecting Conifers For the Landscape") for arborists. In addition, Bruce Fraedrich, Bartlett Tree Experts, spoke about pesticide spill handling.

Proper lime application can increase your dry weather yield

You can't control the weather, but you can increase your dry weather yield by controlling soil fertility with proper lime application. Fall and early winter lime application corrects soil pH, restores vital nutrients, and makes your fertilizer more effective in preparation for spring planting.

Today's successful growers work harder than ever before — but they also work smarter. Alfalfa farmers across the country recognize that in tough times, they can't afford to gamble with anything less than W-L alfalfa seed to give them the high yields, quality forage and long stand life necessary for a profitable crop. They also know that W-L alfalfas are backed up by over 25 years of research, technical teams of experts and a reliable, service-oriented distribution system.

You can't buy better alfalfa seed than W-L — you can't afford to buy less.

Forestry Video Conference Sites Under Consideration

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Landowners seeking to get the most out of their forest resource should make arrangements now to view the upcoming February 15 Forest Stewardship Video Conference.

The video conference will show how landowners can benefit from the Forest Stewardship Program and the Stewardship Incentives Program (SIP), according to Dr. Stephen B. Jones, Penn State School of Forest Resources. Anyone with a satellite dish can receive the program at no cost. The coordinates for C-band transmission are Galaxy 6, Channel 22; downlink frequency is 4140 MHz, audio 6.2 and 6.8.

"This video conference will provide various examples of certified Stewardship forests across the nation and will provide the most current information concerning national SIP guidelines," said Jones.

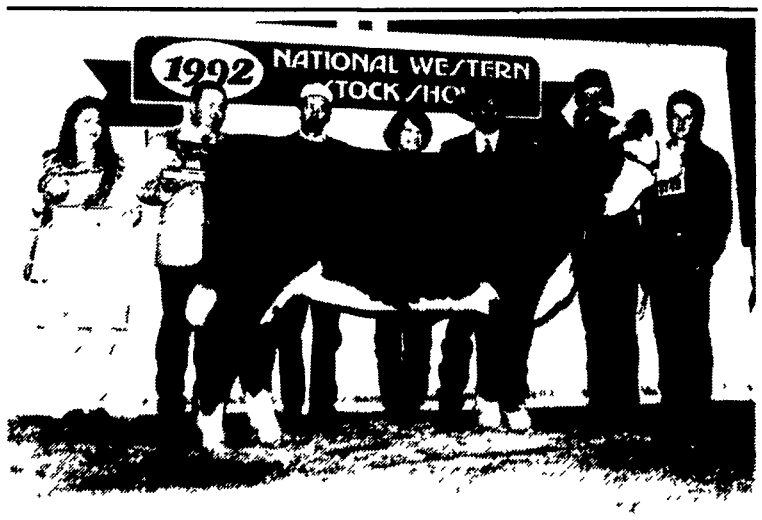
A 90-minute program, the Forest Stewardship Video Conference will feature a one-hour exploration of good forest stewardship practices, economic and environmental benefits of sound forest management practices, and financial assistance programs available to assist landowners with stewardship efforts.

The final 30 minutes will be devoted to a live question-and-answer session where participants can call in questions and have them answered immediately on the air by a panel of top experts.

Although the primary audience is landowners who may be interested in forest stewardship, all Stewardship program cooperators will find the information beneficial, explains Dr. Jones.

The Forest Stewardship Program is an effort to recognize landowners who apply conservation principles to the management of their forests.

Anyone interested in viewing the February video conference should contact their local county extension office. Currently, downlink sites have been arranged for Harrisburg, Bedford, State College, and Warren.



ABC Jazzy Time 0220 earned her third national grand champion title after topping the national Hereford show at the National Western Stock Show in Denver. Sired by Tex Prime Time, the champion heifer earned the top honors after winning the senior calf class and fall calf division. Adams Bros. & Co., owned by Bill and Liz Sharp and managed by Roger Chenoweth, Kilgore, Neb., exhibited the winning heifer.

K&B Horizon 9208 1ET, owned by K&B Herefords, Onida, S.D., took home the grand champion bull honors of the national Hereford show held during the National Western Stock Show in Denver. Sired by DR Achiever 8403, the senior yearling entry weighed 2,604 pounds, had a weight-per-day-of-age of 2.96, stood 62.25 inches tall and had a scrotal measurement of 48 cm.

Herefords Win Big At National Show

DENVER, Colo. — As the temperature dropped in Denver, the anticipation and temperature in Stadium Arena were quite hot for the National Hereford show held during the 86th National Western Stock Show.

A large crowd watched exhibitors from 26 states and Canada lead 83 bulls and 82 heifers through the ring in quest of gaining recognition in the breed's most important show. The tough chore of judging the competition was left to Butch Sellman, Crawford, Neb.

K&B Horizon 9208 1ET, the reserve grand champion bull last year, made his second appearance in Denver to claim the grand champion bull honors. The Ken Bieber family owners of K&B Herefords, Onida, S.D., exhibited the DR Achiever 8403 son that weighed 2,604 pounds, stood 62.25 inches tall, had a scrotal measurement of 48 cm. and had a weight-per-day-of age of 2.96. Earlier in the day preceding the championship victory, "Horizon" won the blue ribbon in the senior yearling class and purple ribbon in the senior bull division.

Adams Bros. & Co., owned by Bill and Liz Sharp and managed by Roger Chenoweth, Kilgore, Neb., started off their successful day by leading ABC Jazzy Time 0220 into the winner's circle as the grand champion female. Claiming her third national show title of the season, the 56.75-inch Tex Prime Time daughter secured the top position after winning the senior calf class and fall heifer calf division.

Adams Bros. & Co. continued their winning ways capturing the reserve grand champion bull honors with ABC Endeavor 1086. Sired by last year's champion, ABC Power Time 9052, the 54-inch bull earned the runner-up slot after a first-place victory in the early spring bull calf class and bull calf division. "En- deavor" weighed in at 1,191 pounds and had a 3.85 WDA and scrotal measurement of 39 cm.

HF L1 Maiden 009 4ET, named the 1991 reserve champion heifer calf and owned by Matthew Harrison Coley, Pembroke, Ky., returned to Denver this year to claim the reserve grand champion female honors. The HF Arapaho 7095 4ET daughter standing 59.50 inches tall walked her way into the purple circle after victories in the junior yearling class and yearling division.

MAKE THE RIGHT TURN IN COW NUTRITION

With a March 1 calving date for most the beef cows in the region fast approaching, it is important to remember the nutritional needs of the cow are changing at a rapid rate at this time.

About one-third of the total fetal growth will occur in the last 30 days before birth. This drain on the nutritional status of the cow will reduce the amount of feed available to the cow for adding body condition and gearing up for lactation.

When not enough feed is available, the cow simply starts to use up body stores, loses weight, and reduces her chances of optimum milk production and getting rebred for next year.

To be sure the cows will have adequate nutrition during this period, the first step is as simple as looking at them. Evaluate the body condition of the herd with a critical eye, especially the younger cows.

For individual cows that have prominent vertebra in the back, protruding, sharp hip bones, no fat deposits over the tailhead, and have three or more ribs easily seen, a different nutritional program must be followed.

When cows are this thin, the feed requirement is such that they must take care of the fetal growth and lactation, but must also start gaining weight if thet are going to get rebred. These cows should be sorted and fed differently.

Cows with moderate flesh, some fat at the tailhead, a flat back, and a rib or two showing are in acceptable shape and no further weight gain will be needed. Conversely, if there are individual cows with no ribs showing, heavy fat deposits, and wide, flat backs with the hips barely seen, this is an indication they are being overfed or are able to keep others in the herd from getting their share.

Again, these cows must be sorted from the rest of the herd. The nutritional requirement for a beef cow for protein effectively doubles or, if it is a particularly heavy-milking cow, triples at the time the cow calves.

Most beef cows are able to get sufficient protein from a good grass orgrass-legume hay until they calve. With a good legume mix, an average milking cow can still get all the protein she needs from the hay as long as she gets all of it she wants. For higher milk production, a supplemental protein is needed. Along with a full-feeding of good hay, 2 pounds (or the equivalent) of soybean meal must be fed to meet her needs.

Again, a full-feeding of good grass-legume hay will meet the energy needs of acow until she calves, but then things change. The total digestible nutrient (TDN) require will go up from 20 percent to 50 percent and most cows simply cannot eat enough hay to fill this need. In the case of those thin cows that must gain some weight, this TDN requirement may be doubled.

The most economical source of supplemental energy is usually corn, and it can be fed whole, ground, or rolled with equal results. In addition to the hay, it will take 2-3 pounds of corn (or equivalent) daily to meet the energy needs of most cows. Again, up to 6 pounds of corn may need to added for the thin cows, while fat cows may not need any.

Is it economical to feed these supplements? Consider these two points: a beef cow will reach her peak of milk production 60-90 days after calving and a cow has 84 days to get rebred after calving if she is to have a calf within the next 12 months. One of the reasons for March 1 being an optimum time of calving in our region is so the peak of milk yield will coincide with the flush of spring grazing.

Remember also that cow will have produced about 60 percent of all of the milk she will produce in that lactation by May 1. If those calves are going to get off to a good start and reach their maximum potential for growth, feeding the cow correctly for those 60 days after calving is critical.

Similarly, the plane of nutrition (whether the cow is gaining weight, losing weight, or staying constant) will play a major role in whether the cow will begin cycling in time to be rebred. The cost of extended calving intervals is enormous to the cow-calf enterprise.

With an average potential weaning weight of 500 pounds and calves being sold at a similar time in the fall, extension of the calving season by only one month will reduce the pay weight by about 40 pounds per calf. Those 40 pounds may be the only profit there is in the cattle business for some years!

Unfortunately, the raod to good beef cow nutrition is not a straight one. There are a few turns and curves that will occur that will be costly ones if they are not handled correctly.

WATERY DdroppingS

Donald L. Singletary
Dept. of Veterinary Science

When layers were first placed in cages, a serious problem described as watery droppings developed. For the most part, the problem has been controlled but watery droppings still occur from time to time. The problem has also been reported occasionally in broiler breeders on litter.

The condition does not affect the health of the birds but it is difficult to maintain sanitary conditions in the poultry house. The birds do not appear sick and usually continue to lay at expected levels.

Watery droppings should not be confused with failure of the droppings to cone properly. The droppings may become watery after passing from the bird. This problem is most frequently due to a leaky water system, high humidity, poor ventilation, and fly larvae.

There are many causes of watery droppings, and determining the one responsible for the problem is often difficult. Certain strains of layers have a tendency to produce a more watery dropping than other strains.

Layers at high levels of egg production usually have a wetter dropping than at other times in the laying cycle. Periods of hot weather, when birds are drinking more water, contribute to a wetter dropping. Other factors such as worms, enteritis, mineral and salt content of the drinking water and feed, and high energy rations have also been involved in watery dropping problems.

Sometimes overlooked is the effect that certain infectious bronchitis viruses have on the kidneys. While bronchitis is primarily a respiratory infection, the virus can also cause permanent kidney damage. Thus, an evaluation of the bronchitis vaccination program may be necessary to control watery droppings if bronchitis is found to be the cause.

If feed is found to be involved in the problem, using a lower energy feed or a feed with less salt will normally correct the problem.

When properly managed, restricting the flock's water consumption has controlled watery droppings without causing a drop in egg production. Of course, any worm or enteritis problem should be treated with the proper medications. A water conditioning unit may be necessary if high levels of minerals or salt are found in the birds' drinking water.

Fortunately, the watery droppings problem experienced by caged layers has been reduced to only occasional reports. The finding that infectious bronchitis virus damages the kidneys has also helped understand this complex problem.

Farmers Union Wants GATT Text Rejected

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The last five years of negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade will have been a waste of time where farmers are concerned if a pending draft agreement on agriculture is accepted.

That was according to National Farmers Union President Leland Swenson, who testified before the House Ways and Means Committee's Subcommittee on trade.

Swenson told the subcommittee the so-called "Dunkel draft," developed late last year by GATT Director General Arthur Dunkel, represents a losing proposition for the United States. "It will take more than a bit of tinkering around the edges for the Dunkel draft to be good for American agricultural producers," Swenson said.

Swenson's group is deeply troubled by provisions in the GATT text that would create a new "Multilateral Trade Organization" to oversee world trade and referee trade disputes between nations. "The new MTO would have the power to try to compel nations to change their national laws, to rule on the acceptability of those laws in total secrecy without accountability to the people," he said.

The farm leader argues that the Dunkel draft, particularly the MTO provision, goes far beyond the original intent of the Uruguay Round when it started five years ago, and "strikes hard at the issue of national sovereignty and self governance."

Swenson also listed a number of specific objections farmers have voiced over the GATT document. He said it raises questions about the ability of Congress to enforce trade statutes, including those that protect against predatory trade practices, and virtually eliminates production-based farm programs designed to give stability to farm and food prices.

Farmers Union also questions language in the Dunkel text relating to the harmonization of food health and safety standards around the world. The group contends that the new global standards would be lower than U.S standards in some cases and would thus compromise American consumers.

Finally, Swenson told the subcommittee that the text requires U.S. agricultural markets to be opened to more imported products, while the possibility of greater export opportunities for American farmers "falls far short of what was previously promised."

He concluded that the draft agreement "represents a bad agreement for American farmers and consumers and deserves to be rejected."

Poultry Waste Conference Topic

NEWARK, Del. — University of Delaware Cooperativle Extension personnel joined forces with the University of Maryland to make the second annual Profitable Agriculture and a Clean Environment (PACE) conference a success.

The event, held recently in Annapolis, Md., focused on adaptive on-farm research in the Chesapeake Bay region. Three University of Delaware professionals, with Dr. Dennis Murphy of the University of Maryland, presented a session on recycling poultry nutrients. Dave Woodward, assistant extension director at Delaware, was moderator.

George "Bud" Malone, poultry scientist at Delaware's Research and Education Center, led off the session with a report on manure production and poultry litter evaluation. He has been collecting data from 40 different farms over six consecutive flocks to identify the amount of composition of poultry litter generated on Delmarva.

Malone reported that preliminary results showed litter production in broilers ranged from 1.11 tons of wet litter per 1,000 birds per flock to 1.23 tons per 1,000 birds per flock, depending on the cleanout program. Litter produced was as low as .53 tons per thousand birds per flock for Cornish and as high as 23.6 tons per thousand birds per flock for breeders.

He stressed that all of his current figures are estimates and are subject to change as data continues to be tabulated. Malone expects a final report, which will include nutrient analysis of litter according to management variables such as drinker and house type, to be published next month.

Dan Palmer, Delaware's extension poultry specialist, reported on cost-share programs that are available in Delaware to encourage responsible solutions to poultry waste management. He emphasized the need for dialogue among all involved parties including growers, regulatory agencies and conservation groups in order to reach agreeable solutions.

One of these solutions, a dead-bird composter, was showcased by Murphy, Maryland's extension poultry specialist at Lower Eastern Shore Research and Education Center. He was instrumental in the initial research resulting in a composting "recipe" of straw, dead-birds and manure that yields a spreadable compost. Murphy also discussed the plans and procedures for building and operating an on-farm dead-bird composter.

Tom Williams, Delaware's extension water quality specialist, concluded the session with an update on nutrient management in Delaware. Williams outlined a 13-point system of nutrient management that included knowing crop nutrient requirements, setting realistic yield goals and testing soil annually. He encouraged farmers to contact cooperative extension to help them design an appropriate nutrient management plan.

Williams reported that Delaware is concentrating its nutrient management effort in the Inland Bays area of eastern Sussex County, with a goal of having 56 percent of the cropland in the area under nutrient management plans within five years.

The company that invented the idea, and the machine, has now reinvented it - from the ground up. From the tough "walking beam" suspension to the sleek 6 ton hopper. And the price is right, too.

FARM MANAGEMENT

NEW ADVERTISING METHOD SINGLE SHEET INSERTS

Jeff Patton
Extension Marketing Agent

If you didn't notice the one-page flyer that fell out of today's newspaper, look again. It could be an effective way for retail farm marketers to get more impact from their advertising dollars sales next season. It's called a single sheet insert.

"Single page inserts give the independent retailer a way to put their message in the hands of a closely targeted consumer audience for a very favorable cost," said Shelly Salak, single sheet coordinator at "The Morning Call," Allentown. "We think of it as their [the smaller retailer's] vehicle."

Here's the scoop on single sheet inserts. They are:

- An advertising method available at many daily newspapers.
- A one-sheet flyer, eight and one-half inches by eleven inches.
- Designed, typeset, copied and inserted by the newspaper.
- Inserted for all subscribers in zones chosen by the advertiser.
- Estimated at forty to fifty-five dollars per thousand sheets, depending on quantity and and extras.
- Required in minimum quantities of five thousand or more.
- Available with these extras: printed both sides; with colored inks and paper; on seventeen inch by eleven inch paper folded in half; with perforated coupons; with demographic info for zones (available from some papers).

Farm markets who plan to advertise this coming season should explore the single sheet insert with their daily newspapers now. In addition to Allentown's "The Morning Call," other dailies offer single sheet inserts including "The Reading Eagle," "The Intelligencer" (Doylestown), "The Reporter" (Lansdale) and "The Mercury" (Pottstown).

It's the ability to zone the flyer that makes single sheet inserts worth considering. For instance, "The Morning Call" has 48 zones available throughout their nine-county circulation area. The number of subscribers in each zone ranges from a low of 800 to a high of more than 9,000. Zones in rural areas consist of three to eight towns. The city of Allentown is available in 13. Detailed street maps of zones are available.

Readers will see your single sheet insert — it's there between the newspaper sections and they have to handle it. But will it lead to more consumer sales? Answer these questions about your farm market:

- Do the farm products and the form they are in suit the reader?
- Do your farm market's appearance, the road sign, and the interior project a quality, friendly image?
- Are your products a good value for the quality?
- Are your staff knowledgeable and helpful?

If every answer is yes, then test your idea for a single sheet insert with these questions:

- Do the main messages of the ad address the main needs of the reader?
- Is the artwork and layout appealing?
- Is the ad copy (wording) kept to a minimum? (I've seen inserts that require too much reading).
- Is the timing of the advertisement right?

I've included with this column a sample mock-up of a single sheet insert for a farm market with a flush of strawberries:

This design maximizes visual impact — readers may have to think twice about the French word Voila! ("There you have it!"). Perhaps it's better to send this to zones with better educated, higher income residents more open to and the fancy presentation. If this single sheet insert were run in a middle-income zone, perhaps the leading words ought to be "In Good Taste!"

If you use single sheet inserts, take advantage of the ability to target. Ask the newspaper for demographic info on a zone or call your county planning commission or county extension office. The latest census data can help you tune your message to the types of households within.

Finally, if you like the idea of single sheet inserts, jump on the bandwagon this season before there is one in every edition of every newspaper.

Hereford Carload Show Hosts Winners

DENVER, Colo. — Standing room only was found in the Yard's Livestock Center at the National Western Stock Show as spectators viewed the 77th Hereford carload show.

This year, 17 carloads representing 10 states and one Canadian province were paraded through the arena before judges: Mac Suthers, Arnett, Okla.; Gordon Malm, Albin, Wyo.; and Jimmie Lee Smith, Guthrie, Tex. The carloads is divided into four divisions: senior, junior and spring calves comprised of ten head and yearling bulls consisting of eight head.

Judges and spectators were provided data on the loads consisting of range and average age, average weight and weight-per-day-of-age.

When the final judging calculations were finished, Ray, Bonnie, Guy and Sherry Colyer, owners of Colyer Herefords, Bruneau, Ida., walked away with the grand champion carload award. The junior calves were sired by BP Master Plan and BP Red Standard 137W. The set of bulls turned in an average age of 362 days and an average weight of 1,256 pounds with a 3.47 WDA.

The Lone Star Ranch of Henrietta, Tex., took home the reserve grand champion banner. Represented by the progeny of six bulls, the yearling bulls had an average age of 711 days and an average weight of 2,116 pounds with a 2.98 WDA. The Lone Star Ranch is owned by Doug Bennett and Dusty Rhodes.

A repeat performance of the champion carload in the senior calves division was seen from the Barber Ranch, Channing, Tex. The principle sires of the first-place group included K&B Summit 4064 1ET, Tex Prime Time, and K&B Design 8019 1ET. The load turned in an average age of 462 days, average weight of 1,477 pounds and a WDA of 3.19.

A carload of Tex Prime Time, ABC Power Time 9052 and ABC Big Time 9027 offspring earned the championship honors in the spring bull calves division. Adams Bros. & Co., Kilgore, Neb., showed the carload that had an average age of 303.5 days and average weight 1,132 pounds with a 3.73 WDA.

The reserve champion yearling bull award went to The vonForell Herefords, Wheatland, Wyo. Sired by BP Red Standard 137W, M 4L MJB Ovation 6006, CGD 417S Aurora 807X and 4L K&B Dash 7097, the group of eight bulls turned in an average age of 661 days, an average weight of 1,899 pounds and a WDA of 2.87.

Iodence Herefords, Hemingford, Neb., put together the reserve champion junior bull calves carload. The 10 calves sired by five bulls had an average age of 325 days, average weight of 1,081 pounds and a WDA of 3.31.

The Nebraska entry from Butch Sellman & Family, Crawford, won the reserve champion spring bull calves carload. SR Prime Time 9171, SR 300C Mark 5432, SR Rival 8120 and SR Prime Time 9107 all had sons represented in the load that had an average age of 304.5 days, an average weight of 1,105 pounds and a WDA of 3.63.

The champion Hereford carload honors at the National Western Stock Show in Denver went to Colyer Herefords, owned by Ray, Bonnie, Guy and Sherry Colyer, Bruneau, Ida. The junior bull calves turned in an average age of 362 days, average weight of 2,116 pounds, and a 2.98 weight-per-day-of-age. The ten calves were sired by BP Master Plan and BP Red Standard 137W.

NFSA Announces Task Force

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Fertilizer Solutions Association (NFSA) has announced plans to convene an industry task force to review regulations promulgated by the National Conference on Weights and Measures.

NFSA hopes to encourage the modernization of regulations which today prevent dealers from using the most environmentally-friendly application systems.

"It's important for NFSA to take a leadership role in this important issue. All dealers and farmers are affected by these requirements, and interested in proposed changes," said NFSA president Merle Taylor.

NFSA executive vice president Jim Boillot said, "There are many changes taking place in the manner in which plant nutrients are applied. Our technology is pushing toward precision placement and application accuracy which protects the environment, and maximizes fertilizer efficiency. It's important that outmoded regulations keep pace with technology."

The task force will involve leadership from different sectors including farm groups, plant food dealers, industry, and state regulators. NFSA will issue invitations later this month, and plans to convene the group this spring, before planting season.

Van Dale Presents Bale Processor

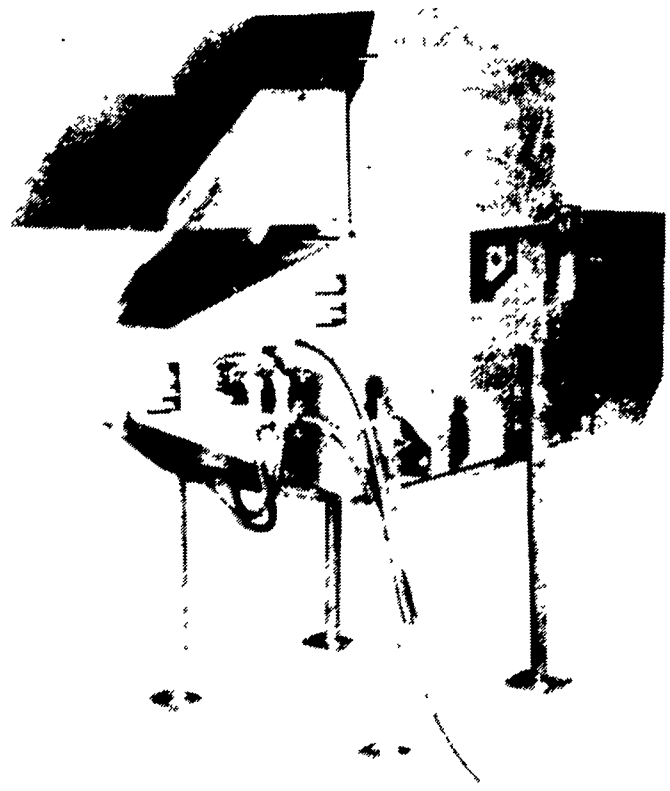
LONG LAKE, Minn. — Van Dale, Inc. has announced a new concept in processing baled hay for use in TMR mixers.

The Van Dale S600 Bale Processor uses a hydraulic ram to push the hay bale through a set of stationary, hardened steel knives, neatly slicing the bale into an average 5" to 6" material while leaving the nutrient-rich leaf material intact on the stems.

The S600 will process up to two bales per minute without the dust and debris often associated with rotary knife equipment. The unit can be used in a stationary application utilizing a 5 H.P. Power Pack or is available with an optional 3-point hitch attachment using tractor hydraulics.

Priced at about $3,500, the S600 Bale Processor is the latest addition to Van Dale's extensive line of automated feeding equipment.

For further information, contact Van Dale, Inc., Box 337, Long Lake, MIN. 55356, (800) VAN-DALE.



The S600 will process up to two bales per minute without the dust and debris often associated with rotary knife equipment.

Joe Butwin, president of Hytest Seeds, right, honors Joe Matejik, Mechanicsville, for winning first place in Class A competion in the Pennsylvania contest.

Hytest Seeds Honors Growers

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Hytest Seeds, Inc., a Buffalo-based regional seed company, won two first places and one second place nationally in the 1991 National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) yield contest.

The company held their corn growers appreciation dinner last week. James C. Justice II, a NCGA national champion from Beckley, W. Va., spoke to 150 customers and representatives, many from the region.

Honored at the banquet were Justice for placing first in the national Class A and Virginia with Hytest Variety HT650A (for a 259.0697 bushel-per-acre yield). Joseph L. Matejik, Mechanicsville, was honored for placing first in Class A competition in Pennsylvania with variety HT736 with a yield of 200.5841 bushels. Also, Haisdan Farm, Sharon, Conn., was recently honored for winning first place Class A in Connecticut with variety HT650A at 178.8533 bushels per acre.

"This meeting allows dealers, growers, and others in the industry to meet and share information to improve their operations," said Bob Nobbs, marketing manager for Hytest Seeds, Inc.

Joe Butwin, president of Hytest Seeds, Inc., said, "Hytest is very excited about our products. We have had back-to-back national Class A yield champions and have placed in the top four nationally for the past five years."

James Justice was honored for placing first in the nation and Virginia in NCGA competition at the annual Hytest Seeds banquet last week.

Butwin said that Hytest is winning more state contests every year.

"It's encouraging to note that every year, more of the best growers in the Northeast are turning to Hytest to maximize their yields," he said.

Hytest Seeds has been in the farm seed business since 1912 and provides a full line of seed to growers throughout the eastern seabord from Maine to Georgia.

New Sizes For Firestone Tires

DES MOINES, Iowa — The Firestone Agricultural Tire Division has introduced a number of new sizes for some of its more popular tire lines, including an industry-exclusive R-2 size for its Radial Champion Spade Grip line.

In addition, four new metric sizes have been added to the Firestone Radial All Traction DT line of farm tires, while Firestone's Radial All Traction Utility R-4 line received one new radial size.

Line by line, here are the additions:

• Metric sizes 480/70R28, 480/70R30, 710/75R34 and 710/70R83 have been added to Firestone's Radial All Traction DT line of farm tires. The new metric Radial All Traction DT sizes provide wide, low tire profiles for reduced soil compaction; a premium tread depth for long tread life; a multi-angled lug design for optimum wear and traction; a vibration resistant tread lug configuration for a smooth and quiet ride at travel speed; and reinforced tread bars for added durability and reliability in tough service situations.

These new metric sizes are intended for both North American and European replacement service, and will also be offered for domestic original equipment fitment. Many original equipment makers are currently using this tire for fitment on tractors destined for export to Europe.

Metric tire sizing is not difficult to understand, according to Barry Pace, director of marketing and sales for the Firestone agricultural tire division. "For example, take size 710/70R38. The 710 means the tire is 710 millimeters wide at its widest point from sidewall to sidewall," said Pace. "The 70 means the tire is 70 percent as tall as it is wide, in this case 497 millimeters from the bead to the tread crown. The R stands for radial, and the 38 is the rim diameter measured in inches."

• The popular Firestone Radial Champion Spade Grip line has been bolstered by the addition of the industry's first 20.8R42 size with an R-4 tread depth. The new size is designed for use in wet field applications such as rice and sugar cane farming. The Radial Champion Spade Grip's 45-degree traction bars, coupled with the R-2 tread depth, provides enhanced traction on wet ground, thereby improving productivity and reducing fuel consumption.

"In the last year, this particular line has seen two industry firsts," said Pace. "Last year we introduced the world's first 12.4R42 R-2 radial to meet the emerging demand for a deep lugged R-2 tread design in that popular size. This year, again in response to the needs of our customers and end-users, we've added the first R-2 in size 20.8R42."

• Size 17.5LR24 has been added to the Firestone Radial All Traction Utility R-4 line. The new size is designed primarily for construction and industrial applications. The tire's radial construction and unique tread design provide reduced lug vibration for a smoother ride, long tread life, and enhanced traction and flotation for improved fuel consumption and reduced turf damage.

Lamb, Wool Promotion Workshop Set

DENVER, Colo. — Sheep producers from across the nation will converge on Denver, Colo., June 5-6 for the first National Lamb and Wool Promotion Workshop sponsored by the American Sheep Industry Association.

At the workshop, sheep producers will cover aspects of promoting their product, including designing display materials that pmmote, effective taste samplings, learning to sell, fair events that work for the industry, working with retailers, project planning, image development and wool promotions. Also, participants will have the opportunity to share with attendees the promotional materials that their state has put together in a trade show which will showcase theu efforts.

On the national level, participants will have the opportunity to learn about current ASI promotional efforts, what is working and why the promotional efforts are directed the way they currently are. Also, participants win be encouraged to brainstorm in small groups in an effort to develop a bank of ideas for lamb and wool promotions.

Workshop sessions are to be led by recognized state and national leaders in commodity marketing.

To participate, interested parties must pre-register through their state associations. Cost to participants will be a $50 registration fee.

Ag Unit Purchases Hi-Tech Equipment

DES MOINES, Iowa — As part of its ongoing production improvement program, the Firestone Agricultural Tire Division has recently installed new tire building equipment that not only enhances the uniformity but also the durability of its most popular farm and forestry flotation tires.

The division's Des Moines plant, which makes most of the Firestone agricultural tires marketed in North America, has purchased and installed a $3 million ORS-25 tire assembly machine. The ultra high-tech tire building system uses a unique combination of computer and laser technology to drastically improve tire uniformity, which is difficult to maintain on such large tires.

"The installation of this new state-of-the-art equipment, as with the other improvements we are making, is truly customer-driven," said Barry Kadechuk, president of the Firestone agricultural tire division.

The new tire assembly equipment is being used to build 25- and 26-inch rim diameter flotation tires, which are used for such applications as fertilizer spreaders or skidders used in logging. Both Firestone's popular Flotation 23 Degree DT and Flotation 23 Degree DT Logger models, in 25- and 26-inch sizes, are being built using this equipment.

"Because of environmental concerns, the agricultural tire marketplace — both farm and forestry — has moved toward wider and wider flotation tires. On the farm, wider tires mean less soil compaction; in forestry applications, wider tires help limit rutting and unnecessary disturbance of timberland. These are key concerns of farmers, the forestry industry, the government and environmentalists," said Kadechuk.

"Our aim with this new equipment was to improve the performance of our wide flotation tires," said Kadechuk. "And we have achieved our goal. The greater uniformity the ORS-25 equipment affords us translates into greater enhanced tire durability, which, in turn, results in better operating service, longer tire life, and less downtime for farm and forestry equipment."

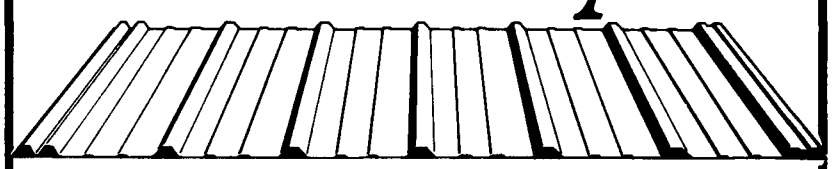
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Channeldrain® roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Channeldrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Channeldrain as handsome as it is economical.

NEW From Zook
BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds
BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.
MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.
ON-FARM MIXING
A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

Have the bugs eaten your insulation?
Darkling Beetles Devastating Insulation In Poultry Houses
Poultry growers are becoming increasingly aware that the fiberglass insulation that was installed a few years ago is disappearing. The Darkling Beetle (some folks know it as that little black bug) has been creating havoc, making it's home in the litter. It then moves into the wall cavity where it eats the insulation. Soon, not only do you have a severe bug problem, your energy dollars are escaping through your walls.
The Solution
IN-CIDE Pest Control insulation is the only brand of insulation certified for insect control by the Environmental Protection Agency. IN-CIDE is fused with material that has been proven effective in controlling insects where they live and breed. It remains effective under normal conditions and usage for the life of the structure. While IN-CIDE is deadly to insects, it is safe for people and animals.
Other Benefits
IN-CIDE is a superior insulator to fiberglass. It completely fills the cavity, virtually eliminating gaps and voids which allow energy robbing air-infiltration. It has a higher effective R-value and is more dense than standard insulation. IN-CIDE is fire retardant, sound deadening and safe.
IN-CIDE IS A PERMANENT SOLUTION TO YOUR BUG & INSULATION PROBLEMS

Ideal for insulating new buildings or for re-insulating older structures. The cavity is completely filled for total protection.

The Eby Wrangler...
★ Better Looking ★ Better Built
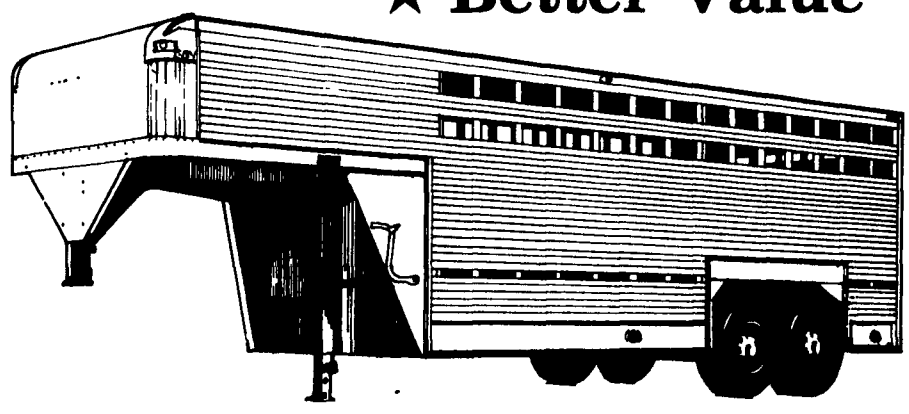
★ Better Value



The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limiting the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wranger 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
- Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
- Aerodynamic, attractive design
- Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
- 2-year warranty

Specifications
- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
- 7' Width
- 6'6" Inside height

NFU Asks Bush To Help Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmers whose crops were wiped out by weather disasters in 1990 or 1991 may get some help from the White House if President George Bush heeds a call made by the National Farmers Union (NFU).

In a letter to Bush, NFU President Leland Swenson asked for actions that "will mitigate the financial strain this has caused."

Farmers were hit hard with a variety of crop disasters in both of the last two growing seasons. Weather problems from drought to floods plagued producers with lower yields and in some cases, total crop losses.

According to the NFU letter, Congress last year authorized $1.75 billion for disaster assistance. Of that total, $995 million is now available — an amount NFU said will cover only a portion of the crop losses experienced by farmers in 1990 and 1991. The Department of Agriculture estimates that payments may represent thirty cents to forty cents per dollar of loss.

"An additional $755 million has been authorized as discretionary funding and can be accessed at your request," Swenson wrote. "We urge you to use the additional available funding."

Secondly, the farm group asked the president to urge USDA to expedite 1990-1991 payments. NFU said entire communities are suffering the affects of crop losses and reduced farm income. "Getting money into the hands of qualified producers can go a long way toward alleviating the credit crunch in hard hit areas," said the letter.

To that end, Swenson urged Bush to authorize immediate partial payments to farmers that would be made at the time they certify their crop losses.

Finally, recognizing the poor start some fall-seeded crops got as a result of drought, Farmers Union asked Bush to use $100 million that were earmarked in the discretionary package to offset losses on 1992 harvested crops.

Swenson also asked the president to anticipate future losses by requesting funding for disaster programs as part of his fiscal 1993 budget recommendation.

Without the funding, NFU leaders say the economic hardships faced by farmers and rural communities will get worse. "Your prompt action will provide immediate relief and send a message that you support the work of America's farmers and the communities who are depending on them," Swenson wrote.

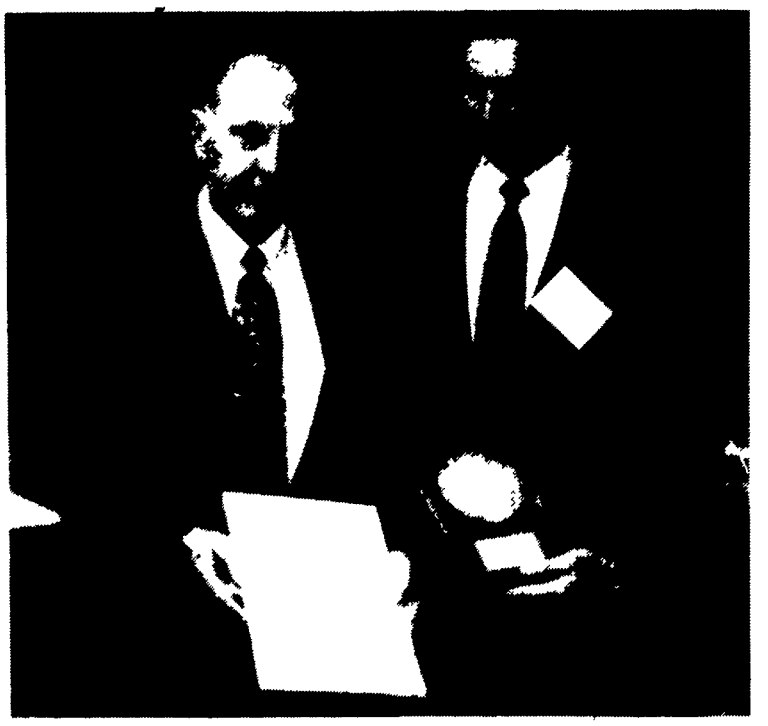
Simmental Association Presents World Honors

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Colville C. Jackson, Jr. of Gloster, Miss. and Earl B. Peterson, Denver, Colo. have been awarded the prestigious World Simmental Federation (WSF) Golden Book Awards. Announcement of the awards was made during the Honors Luncheon at the American Simmental Association's (ASA) 24th annual meeting in Denver.

The highest recognition given by the WSF, the Golden Book Award, recognizes those individuals that have made noteworthy contributions to the Simmental breed of cattle.

Jackson, a graduate of Tulane University, served six years on the ASA Board of Trustees from 1975 to 1981, and as president in 1978. The owner-operator of Kintyre Farm, he founded one of the first Simmental/Simbrah herds in the United States. He was a charter member of the Mississippi Simmental Association and served numerous terms as the MSA's secretary-treasurer.



Earl B. Peterson, left, former executive vice president of the American Simmental Association (ASA) and currently vice president for finance of the National Cattleman's Association, was awarded the World Simmental Federation's prestigious Golden Book Award. ASA Board of Trustees Chairman Johnny Poore, Barnesville, Ga., made the presentation.

He was a charter member of the Mississippi Beef Improvement Federation; a past president of the Mississippi Angus Association; a member of the steering committee of the Dixie National Livestock Show; and served three years on the board of ASA Publications, Inc.

Peterson served on the ASA staff from 1975 to 1990, first as executive administrator and then in 1978 took over as chief executive officer. He earned a B.S. degree from North Dakota State University, and a Masters and PhD from Montana State University in Agricultural Economics. Prior to assuming his ASA position, Peterson had worked as a teacher, banker and university administrator.

Presently vice president for finance for the National Cattlemen's Association in Denver, Peterson is given credit for ASA's solid financial footing. "His visionary approach to management enabled the Simmental and Simbrah breeds to grow and prosper at the same time that most other breeds were diminishing," the award inscription reads.

Golden Book Award winners are nominated and approved by the ASA Board of Trustees.

ASI Slates Leadership Schools

DENVER, Colo. — Following the success of its 1991 Leadership Schools, the American Sheep Industry Association has slated four Leadership Schools for 1992.

The schools are to be held in Reno, Nev., March 6-7; Indianapolis, Ind., March 20-21; Denver, Colo., March 27-28; and Raleigh-Durham, N.C., June 19-20.

All interested parties are encouraged to attend. Preregistering through a state association is required. Transportation and lodging costs are to be picked up by participants. Meals will be provided by ASI.

The purpose of the Leadership Schools is to strengthen state association leadership. Participants are able to sharpen their skills by going through group workshops on goal setting, working with committees, a short personality test and an ASI question and answer period.

The second-day participants use the ideas garnered in the opening day to develop programs for their states by learning to work as a spokesperson with media and learning how to work with volunteers. Other areas to be covered include association fund raising and member recruitment.

The ASI Leadership Schools will be conducted by state and national leaders recognized in their specific areas of expertise.

ICI Seeds Produces Herbicide-Tolerant Corn

COON RAPIDS, Iowa — In early 1991, ICI Seeds introduced the industry's first commercially available herbicide-tolerant corn hybrid, ICI brand 8532IT. The company added three new herbicide-tolerant corn hybrids to its product lineup. All four hybrids are marketed under the ICI Seeds brand name.

"The development of herbicide-tolerant hybrids is a significant breakthrough in seed research and planting breeding," said Dr. Michael Martin, research director of ICI Seeds worldwide hybrid corn research center at Slater, Iowa.

"Our researchers examined thousands of corn seedlings to locate the variant that showed specific tolerance to the herbicide chemical, imazethapyr," Martin said. "We were the first seed company to identify the imazethapyr-tolerant (IT) trait without requiring the help of an outside source, and we were able to carry this process through to commercilization much quicker than the competition. After this important discovery, our researchers used biotech-aided normal breeding techniques to successfully introduce the IT trait to select hybrids.

"Advanced research techniques allowed for fast-track development of these IT hybrids. We developed this generation of products, however, without the use of genetic engineering or recombinant DNA technology," Martin said.

Herbicide-tolerant hybrids available in 1992 are ICI 8532IT, 8536IT, 8708IT and 8539IT. Martin says each IT hybrid is tolerant to the herbicide imazethapyr, commonly known as Pursuit® and marketed by American Cyanamid Company.

Pursuit is not presently registered by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for use to control weeds in corn.

The IT trait in the hybrids may prove beneficial to many farmers next growing season, even without approval of Pursuit's IT corn label, Martin said.

Many parts of the Corn Belt experienced varying and extreme weather conditions in 1991. Abnormally wet conditions last spring forced many growers to plant their soybeans late. Some areas also experienced drought conditions during the growing season.

Because of 1991's weather woes, some university specialists believe there is potential for carryover problems for growers who applied imidazolinone herbicides to their soybeans and are planning to rotate to corn in 1992. The current chemical labels for use of Pursuit and Scepter®, members of the imidazolinone family of herbicides, spell out conditions that can lead to carryover problems.

To protect themselves from possible carryover problems with this family of herbicides, affected growers basically have three choices: 1) they can plant soybeans a second year in a row and risk significantly reduced yields, 2) they can rotate to susceptible (non-Pursuit-tolerant) corn and risk potential carryover problems which may reduce yields, or 3) they can plant the new IT hybrids and have peace of mind, knowing that IT corn is highly tolerant of the small amounts of herbicides, such as imazethapyr and imazaquin (Scepter), that can carry over under certain conditions and would otherwise cause extensive damage to conventional corn hybrids.

The IT hybrids can be planted in the same geographic areas where regular (non-IT) 8532, 8536, 8708 and 8539 hybrids already have proven their performance, Martin said. The only difference in the new IT hybrids is the imazethapyr-tolerant trait, he said.

In March 1991, the company successfully introduced the trail-marketed 8532IT. In addition to several years of extensive in-house testing, 8532IT was evaluated in 1991 by weed scientists at several Midwestern universities, including the University of Illinois, Iowa State University, University of Nebraska and Purdue University.

Rigorous side-by-side yield and performance checks show the new IT hybrids have the same high-yielding characteristics as their non-IT sister hybrids with the same number, Martin said. In

FFA Poultry Projects Need Help

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor
Poultry Science
Penn State

FFA and agricultural education students in high schools across Pennsylvania need help.

For many years, high school live poultry projects have been on a decline in number and, in some cases, quality of project.

High school agricultural education teachers struggle admirably to maintain enrollment in poultry projects but numbers still decrease.

Project books, technical information, and approved practice references are decreasing in completeness and availability. References for high school students on how to care for poultry are too general and not useful to students.

Student interest is not in poultry anymore. High school ag students pursue many tasks or projects but poultry fails to gain even a small share of the interest.

In June of 1990, the State FFA Poultry Judging Contest had only 20 students judging, whereas 10 years ago, 35 to 50 students annually judged eggs, poultry, and processed poultry.

High school agricultural education teachers say they are burdened with many students with personal problems, or most students have low academic ability, or there is not enough time or project references to allow members to complete a turkey, capon, roaster, layer, pullet, broiler, or game bird project.

So if you are a local poultry sales and service person or an alumni of high school agricultural education and can lead a few students in a poultry project, please volunteer to help train students by contacting your nearest agricultural education teacher.

ICI Seeds Produces

addition, other popular agronomic characteristics, such as standability, stay green and test weight, remain the same.

ICI Seeds corn breeding program involves the annual assessment of more than 400,000 yield plots. These plots compare the company's new hybrids to its existing hybrids as well as competitive brands to ensure performance exceeds industry standards.

Development of the herbicide-tolerant corn hybrids is but one of the major research announcements made in 1991 by scientists at the Slater research facility. Earlier in 1991, researchers obtained federal approval to field test genetically modified corn under close USDA guidelines in test plots at the Slater facility.

ICI Seeds is focused on developing and offering the most productive, high-quality seed products. Thanks to advances in hybrid seed, such as IT corn, growers now can select hybrids that best match their cultural and environmental conditions.

Breakthroughs such as herbicide-tolerant corn and genetically transformed corn further strengthen ICI Seeds' leadership role in worldwide seed research, Martin said.

On-Farm Crops Research Has Historic Setting

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — When English settlers moved into Maryland's lower Eastern Shore from Virginia in the 17th century, they found the Pocomokes, a tribe of American Indians, growing corn, beans, and pumpkins on the sandy loam flatlands of Askimenikansen Neck, formed by the junction of the Pocomoke River and Nassawango Creek.

The tribal king resided at Indiantown, north of the present town of Snow Hill in Worcester County.

In the same general area today, Albert W. Owen, Jr., grows corn, soybeans and wheat on his 1,000-acre farming operation between Nassawango Road and the Pocomoke River. So, in some ways, things haven't changed a great deal.

If those Algonquian-speaking agriculturalists from 300 years ago were around today, they'd be amazed — and yet they'd probably feel comfortable talking shop with Owen, who is experimenting with a way to let the laws of nature help to increase the profitability of his cropping operation.

Basically, the concept being tested is this: planting alternate strips of corn and soybeans in a north-south direction should increase corn yields enough to offset a slight loss in soybean yields. This phenomenon is a result of greater sunlight intensity for the tall-growing corn at the expense of decreased light intensity for the shorter-growing soybeans. How has it worked?

After two years of on-farm testing, Owen thinks the system has merit. But because of the extra time required for planting and harvesting, it may not be feasible in all years for all farmers.

He started the experiment in 1990 with alternating six-row strips of corn and soybeans in a 4-½ -acre plot. That year the corn in his test plot yielded 177.1 bushels per acre — 36 percent more than the 130.5-bushel yield from a check field planted with solid corn.

Owen planted a 50-acre field with alternate strips of corn and soybeans in 1991. This time the corn yield in the test plot produced 133.5 bushels per acre — a 19.7 percent advantage over solid-planted corn in a drought year.

Soybean yield results (in bushels per acre) for the two years were as follows:

Year	Test Plot	Check Plot	Yield Loss
1990	51.3	56	8.4 percent
1991	56.5	56.2	None

By comparison, participants in the Worcester County Crop Improvement Program averaged 53.9 bushels per acre for full-season soybeans last year. Owen Farms was the top participant with a field that produced 64.5 bushels per acre.

In both 1990 and 1991, Owen planted Doebler 84XP hybrid corn and Asgrow 4595 full-season soybeans with a 12-row planter in the test plots at a rate of 22,500 seeds per acre. Soybeans were planted at a rate of 10 seeds per foot.

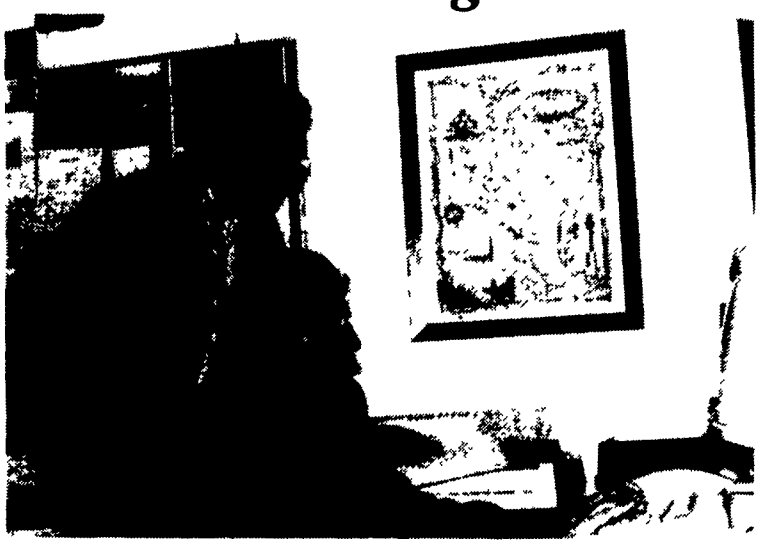
The corn fertility program included 144 pounds of 10-34-0 at planting time and 136.8 pounds of 30 percent UAN as a sidedress after the corn was up. The soybeans did not receive any fertilizer. The corn and soybeans were cultivated twice during the growing season. Weed control was good. No insecticides were used.

Owen was the first farmer in Worcester County to participate in an integrated pest management (IPM) program sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service of the Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources. He started farming eight years ago with no previous experience. He credits experienced farm workers, local agribusiness dealers and the cooperative extension service for much of his success.

The farm has been in his wife's family for generations, and one of the farm workers has been around for 45 years. Owen's father-in-law, Charles R. Fulton of Snow Hill, is a retired businessman, formerly prominent in the Delmarva poultry hatchery industry. Fulton continues to maintain a casual interest in the farming operation.

Owen talked about his corn and soybean experiment during an afternoon breakout session at a farm-oriented environmental conference on Jan. 23 in the Holiday Inn at Annapolis. The conference was titled "Adaptive On-Farm Research in the Chesapeake Bay Region."

It was the second annual conference in a series related to "Profitable Agriculture and a Clean Environment," a program initiated last year by the Cooperative Extension Service of the Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources. MIANR is an institution of the University of Maryland System.



Framed print on wall identifies Delmarva peninsula where the Pocomoke and Nanticoke tribes of American Indians once grew corn, beans, and pumpkins. Nowadays, Albert W. Owen, Jr., seated, of Snow Hill produces corn and soybeans on 1,000 acres of land once claimed by the Pocomokes. Wallace T. (Turp) Garrett, agricultural agent in Worcester County for the cooperative extension service, looks on as Owen studies a graphics display on his computer that is software-generated from an adjacent Data Transmission Network satellite receiver. Owen is experimenting with a way to let the laws of nature help to increase his farm profitability.

University, Industry Must Form Ag Team

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — "The active involvement of farmers, researchers, educators and the agricultural industry is crucial to the development of farming practices that are profitable in the short term and sustainable in the Long run," said Dr. John M. Gerber, the first major morning speaker at the recent Profitable Agriculture and a Clean Environment (PACE) conference at the Annapolis Holiday Inn.

New, farmer-managed organizations have formed throughout the U.S. to develop and share ideas on developing these types of farming practices, said Gerber, an agricultural administrator at the University of Illinois. With some exceptions, Gerber said that public universities, the agricultural industry and established farm organizations have been left on the periphery of this largely farm-driven activity.

"The research and educational paradigm, which insists that information on farming practices be researched by the public university and delivered through Extension programs, is viewed with skepticism by many farmers," Gerber said. But the formation of these (farmer-managed) groups has highlighted the need for an alternative understanding of the relationship and roles of farmers, researchers, educators, the agricultural industry and farm support agencies.

A participatory research and education model is designed to utilize the specific skills and knowledge of each of these people, he said. Since each group member provides a unique input, the resultant partnership relationships are mutually respectful and supportive.

"For example," said Gerber, "researchers may advise an appropriate experimental design and educators may help devise demonstration models or instructional techniques. But farmers must be full participants in all cases — by assisting in identifying problems, setting objectives, selecting alternative testing solutions and interpreting results."

Such participatory programs support a shared vision of research and education, he said. This creates a learning (more) system that makes institution-derived boundaries between researchers and extension educators unimportant. It also helps resolve the distrust that some farmers have for university scientists and industry representatives.

"There are few U.S. working models for participatory agricultural research and education at present," Gerber said. "But individual onfarm research projects in Illinois and elsewhere suggest that this successful model can provide better communication, improved understanding, and enhanced cooperation among farmers, researchers, extension educators, community leaders, and environmentalists."

Gerber, 40, received his doctorate in horticulture from Cornell University. He is actively involved in the University of Illinois' Agro-Ecology Program, which encourages innovative activities in research, teaching and Extension education efforts for agricultural sustainability.

Ag, Government Should Give Priority To High-Value Products

ORLANDO, Fla. — American agriculture can play an increasing role in the economic progress of the developing countries and emerging democracies in central and eastern Europe, the chairman of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives said recently.

Noting the rapid increases expected in the world's population, NCFC Chairman William A. Hiller told the opening session of the 63rd annual meeting of NCFC, "Clearly, the developed world does not have the financial resources to provide food assistance to those areas of the world where the population growth is expected to occur. This means that the developing countries must improve their economies sufficiently to be able to enter the marketplace to meet their needs."

That increased purchasing power in the developing world, he said, would be good for the United States from the standpoint that it would increase demand for food exports and "from the standpoint of world stability."

Hiller, chief executive officer of Agway Inc., Syracuse, N.Y., cited the importance to agriculture of the efforts of NCFC's affiliate, Agricultural Cooperative Development International, to promote economic growth, noting that ACDI has "implemented major initiatives in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union" in addition to its historic programs of assisting cooperatives in developing cooperatives.

NCFC President Wayne A. Boutwell added that a U.S. cooperative delegation would visit Yalta next month for the first exchange in a new protocol involving ACDI and the National Academy of Agricultural Sciences in Moscow.

Boutwell also urged American farmers, their cooperatives and the government to look beyond traditional bulk agricultural exports to exploit the growing market in processed foods.

One of the principal attributes of cooperatives "is the ability to create value by further processing and to return it to farmers in the form of income. We should be gearing both our industry and our government programs in this direction."

Boutwell pointed out that most growth in agricultural exports has come in higher-value products rather than in traditional bulk commodities. In 1981, he said, world trade totaled $75 billion in bulk commodities and $135 billion in value-added products but in 1990, bulk commodity trade was stagnant at $75 billion while trade in value-added products had increased to $225 billion.

"The unfortunate part is that the United States lost market share in this growing market, in part because most of our programs concentrate on moving bulk products," Boutwell said.

Boutwell also outlined challenges for agriculture arising from "declines in government support due to budget pressures, a more global trading system as efforts are made to open markets and reduce barriers" and increased costs imposed on producers and processors from regulations "associated with quality of life."

To respond to challenges such as these, Boutwell concluded, "means that to be successful will require us to continue to be on the cutting edge" of technology, organizational efficiency and the competition for new and expanded markets for agricultural products.

NCFC directors re-elected Hiller to serve another one-year term as the council's chairman and re-elected vice chairmen C.T. Fredrickson, CEO, Farm Credit Bank of St. Louis, St. Louis, Mo.; Gary Hanman, CEO, Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., Springfield, Mo., and Philip F. French, CEO, Countrymark Cooperative, Indianapolis, Ind.

Budget and audit chairman is W.M. Harding, CEO, CoBank — National Bank for Cooperatives, Denver, Colo., and immediate past chairman is Russell L. Hanlin, CEO, Sunkist Growers, Inc., Van Nuys, Calif.

Youth Loans Available From FmHA

LEWISBURG (Union Co.)—Too inexperienced to have established credit? Too young to get a loan?

No record of success to qualify for financial assistance? "Not necessarily so," said D. Eugene Gayman, Farmers Home Administration state director for Pennsylvania.

FmHA has a special loan program for young people at least 10 but less than 21 years old, who need financing to get started in their first money-making enterprise. FmHA's Youth Project Loans are made specifically for young people participating in an organized program of work such as 4-H clubs, Future Farmers of America, or similar organization.

"These loans help young people establish and operate income-producing projects related to their club or organization," Gayman said. "The project must be planned with the assistance of advisors and operated under their guidance."

Loan funds are traditionally used by students to buy calves or lambs and fattening them for market, or to put in a crop and selling the resulting harvest. However, loans can be used for a variety of purposes as long as they produce sufficient income to repay the loan, and provide the youth with the educational experience of successfully conducting a business operation.

Loans for Youth Projects are made through FmHA's farm operating loan program. "While most of the loans go for agricultural activities," Gayman said, "they can be used for many other projects, including repair shops, catering services, craft sales, roadside stands, and many other enterprises."

However, projects must be modest in scope and size, in keeping with school-related activities.

"Getting the capital to start and operate a business is part of the experience," Gayman said. "Our young borrowers must sign a promissory note and become personally responsible for repaying the loan with interest. They must pledge their produce or chattel property — including livestock, equipment, and fixtures — as security for the loan."

Students interested in obtaining a Youth Project Loan should contact the Farmers Home Administration County Office servicing their area.

Adams Co. Beef Producers Elect Officers

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The Adams County Beef Producers held the election of the new officers for the 1992-1993 year. New officers are Charles Sherman, president; Lester Millar, vice president; Donna Byers, treasurer; Karol Sherman, secretary; Susan White, publicity director; and Toni Clabaugh, program director.

The annual Adams County Beef Ball has been scheduled for April 11. Tickets are available through any Adams County Beef Producer member or by contacting Donna Byers at (717) 337-3921, prior to March 23.

The Adams County Beef Ball includes beef hors d'oeuvres beginning at 5:30 p.m., a buffet dinner featuring Adams County pit barbequed beef prepared by the Adams County Beef Producers, crowning of the 1992-1993 Adams County Beef Queen, Parade of Bulls, and dance featuring a country band.

The Adams County Beef Ball has become well known for their outstanding parade of bulls. Every breed of bull produced in Adams County is represented by being led through the dining area.

This is a wonderful opportunity to view the quality animals being produced in Adams County. The Beef Ball will be held at the New Oxford Social Hall. Price per couple is $25 and for singles is $12.50.

Nominations are now being taken for the 1992-1993 Adams County Beef Queen. The Adams County Beef Queen represents and promotes the beef industry for the Adams County area. All nominees are required to be between the ages of 16 and 21, live in Adams County, or be a family associated with the Beef Producers for one year, be the daughter of a family involved in agriculture (deos not have to be beef) and single (never married). All individuals meeting the above requirements are invited to apply. All nominees should contact Karol Sherman at (717) 259-0006.

The Adams County Beef Producers are inviting people to participate in designing a new logo for our association. A $25 first prize will be awarded to the most outstanding design presented to the Beef Producers and chosen for the new logo. All nominees should contact Bill Huffman at (717) 624-4162. All ideas should be presented prior to March 10.

The Beef Producers are funding scholarships for students who apply and meet the following requirements: high school senior planning to attend college or a college student currently attending an accredited college or junior college with a major in agriculture; must have an above-average academic record and have indicated the ability to contribute to the advancement of agriculture; and be a resident of Adams County or active member of the Beef Producers Association no less than two years prior to application. The minimum scholarship will be $500 with a maximum given in one year of $1,500. The awards will be presented at the Beef Ball with the checks being made payable in the fall. All interested should contact Karol Sherman at (717) 259-0006.

The Woods mow'n machine™

It runs circles around trees, shrubs, fence rails and the competition.

Maximum maneuverability is the key to the mow'n machine's growing popularity Because engine power is supplied to each wheel independently, a true 360° zero radius turn can be made smoothly without any damage to your lawn

And the mow'n machine makes all the right moves even in those hard-to-reach places That keeps you from having to double-back for time-consuming follow-up trimming

Available with either a gasoline or diesel powered engine, the mow'n machine also features an out-front mower deck, finger tip controls for speed, direction and breaking and a comfortable, vinyl-padded, driver's seat

Adding versatility to the mow'n machine is easy with these easy-on, easy-off attachments:

Grass Vac 8 cu ft capacity Slide-in Nylon Bag
Grass Vac 13 cu ft capacity Metal Hopper
Snow thrower with cab clears a 47" path
Dozer blade clears a 48' path

Agronomist Discusses Design Of On-Farm Projects

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The design of an on-farm research project depends on the objective of the project as a whole, according to Dr. Rhonda R. Janke, agronomy section leader and acting research leader for the Rodale Institute Research Center at Kutztown, Pa.

Dr. Janke discussed on-farm research at the 1992 PACE Conference: "Adaptive On-farm Research in the Chesapeake Bay Region" on January 23 in Annapolis. The conference was sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service, Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources.

One possible research objective, said Janke, is to demonstrate a proven technology on a working farm for the benefit of other farmers. The design of the research project might not require replications, but data still would be collected on yield, soil and crop nutrient status, and the presence or absence of insect pests.

Another objective might be "on-farm validation," which involves on-farm testing of a technology that has been relatively well-researched at agricultural experiment stations but not tested or fine-tuned to farm situations.

"The goal of such an on-farm validation research project might be to prove that new treatment X works as well as old treatment Y," Janke said.

A replicated, statistically valid design is important to this type of project since differences between the treatments might be small or non-existent.

A third objective, Janke told her audience, might be to test research questions before, while or instead of testing them at agricultural experiment stations. This type of research also requires a statistically sound, replicated design, as well as close interaction between the farmer and researcher.

The Rodale Institute sponsors "farmer driven" on-farm research networks. In this type of research, cooperating farmers decide which trials to conduct based on their interest in a particular practice or innovation, or questions they may have concerning trends or events they have observed in their fields.

Rodale staff facilitate these experiments and demonstration projects, assisting with design and data analysis if the trial is replicated, securing funding for soil and plant analysis if needed, and organizing field days and other events to publicize results. Each of the three Rodale research networks includes 10-15 farmers who were selected for their interest in reducing the use of purchased inputs on their farms, their willingness to try experiments and demonstrations on their farms, and their status as respected members and leaders of their communities.

Janke described the three primary types of projects undertaken on these network farms.

- Screening trials — short-term, non-replicated plots to see if a new practice has potential for the farm; examples include cover crop species and variety comparisons.
- Replicated trials — limited to two or three treatments and replicated four to six times. Plots are large, often the length of the field, and plot width is determined by the farmer's equipment — often two planter or combine widths. The objective is to compare a standard practice to a new practice. Examples include comparing a standard rate of nitrogen to a reduced rate following a legume cover crop, using the late-spring soil nitrate test to estimate nitrogen needs.
- Demonstration trials — involve new practices that are difficult to replicate or large-scale demonstrations of cropping practices that performed well in past replicated plots. An example is comparing soybean/wheat relay cropping to monoculture soybeans in a replicated trial, followed by planting a 50-acre field of the relay crop system in the future.

Janke was raised on a dairy farm in Kansas and received her master's degree and doctorate in agronomy from Cornell University. She speaks to many groups across the nation about sustainable agriculture.

Keep Tabs On Calf Health

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — It can be harder to raise healthy calves in the winter than in the summer, said an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Several physiological, environmental, and management factors make a young calf's life more difficult in winter," said Dr. Larry Hutchinson, professor of veterinary science.

"Energy requirements for newborn calves are much higher in cold weather," Hutchinson said. "Also, many calf health problems are likely to be more severe during winter. Lice, mange mites and ringworm fungi all prosper in confined, damp environments and under conditions of poor nutrition."

The most common cause of sickness and death during a calf's first month of life is diarrhea, or scours. Several pathogens, including E. coli, Rotavirus, Coronavirus, Salmonella and cryptosporidia cause diarrhea in calves.

"These agents can be present year round," Hutchinson said. "But when calves are crowded, stressed by the cold and experiencing inadequate nutrition and less frequent manure removal, scours can become a major health problem in the herd."

Pneumonia is another leading calf killer. "Bacteria and viruses are the immediate cause of pneumonia, but the predisposing factors of dampness, toxic gases, drafts and chilling are even more significant," Hutchinson said. "These are all more prevalent in winter."

The fungus that causes ringworm grows more readily when there is little or no exposure to sunlight, when nutrition is poor and when a calf's haircoat is long. This fungus also can live on building walls that are damp and poorly sanitized.

"Lice and mange mites also are a common problem in winter," Hutchinson said. "Their life cycle, which is completed entirely on the host animal, is fostered by conditions of close confinement and long haircoats."

Usual management procedures may work very well most of the year, but may not be good enough to maintain healthy calves in winter. Hutchinson offers a few tips to keep your calves healthy during cold months.

"Keep gestating cows in adequate, but not fat, condition," he said. "Make sure they get sufficient amounts of vitamins A, D and E, which are more likely to be in short supply in winter. Vaccinating cows in late pregnancy will ensure that specific antibodies against common diseases will pass into the colostrum." Check with your veterinarian on which vaccine to use.

At calving time, make sure cows have an area that is disinfected, clean, dry and well-bedded with long-fiber bedding.

When a calf is born in winter, it's particularly important to ensure early, adequate intake of high quality colostrum. "For Holstein calves, that means ingesting three quarts of colostrum within a half hour after birth," Hutchinson said. "Nipple-bottle or esophageal feeders are the most reliable ways to make sure the calf gets the colostrum it needs."

High quality feed also is vital in winter to avoid diseases. "Feed whole milk, sour colostrum and water at a 3 to 1 ratio, or a high quality milk replacer," Hutchinson said. "In winter, it's best to use a milk replacer with 15 to 20 percent fat."

If possible, keep young calves away from older animals to avoid the transfer of disease. Maintain adequate ventilation to keep moisture down and make sure bedding is always dry.

"Calves should be checked twice a day for early signs of illness, because prompt diagnosis and treatment is vital in cold weather," Hutchinson said. "If you lose a calf, have an autopsy performed. It may give you an early indication of an emerging problem."

CUSTOMER APPRECIATION SALE
AND
WINTERTIME VALUES

Check Our Special Prices Before You Buy

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

When we first started our CUSTOMER APPRECIATION DAYS, we wanted to set aside time so we could talk to every customer and give everyone sufficient time to purchase parts at a reduced price. Over the years, the event has grown so much, we don't have adequate time to spend with every customer to supply their needs. Therefore, in 1992, our CUSTOMER APPRECIATION DAYS will have a different format. Starting FEBRUARY 1, we will start having everyday low prices on as many fast moving parts as we can. We will start with the items that are offered to us on a once a year special purchase. We will reduce our prices on these items by at least 4% below the manufacturers list price, with some discounted as much as 23% below the manufacturers suggested list. We believe that we can offer these items throughout the year, but if we should run out, we have the option to raise our prices back up to suggested list until we have another special purchase. These items we are starting with, are original Ford New Holland replacement haybine guards, knife sections, rake teeth, complete knife assemblies, oil, oil filters, plow shares, spreader drag assemblies and skid loader tires. The items listed for the machines may not include all machines in that category. The only stipulation to this program, is that all items must be purchased in packaged quantity. We will continue to add to this list as we can.

In addition to the lowered prices, we will be giving a 10% CASH DISCOUNT, in addition to the already lowered prices, on all parts purchased in the month of February, 1992. This applies to all parts, in stock or ordered, except oil, tire, plow shares - shins and some other special priced items, as there will be special programs on these items.

Free Financing On Selected Hay & Forage Tools Until Aug. 1, 1992 Plus Up To 48 Month Additional 5.9% APR Financing Available

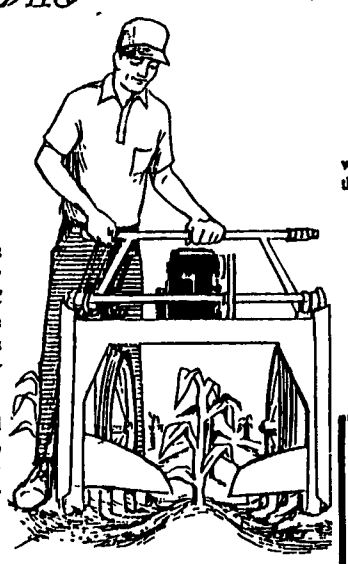
TAYLOR

Over the Row Lawn & Garden

GATOR

With the new TAYLOR Over The Row Lawn & Garden Machine, serious gardeners can have more fun and get more work done!



Why buy several machines when ours does it all?

• Over-the-row cultivators • Beds • Aerates • Tills • Easy-to-change tines adapt to any gardening need. Powered by a 5 HP-IC Briggs & Stratton quiet power engine, the TAYLOR lawn & garden machine is counter-balanced on large spoked tires for effort-free operation.

The Taylor Gator is easy to operate and converts quickly from a tilling operation to bedding or cultivating capabilities. Simply remove the key clamps in the two tiller tines and replace with the bedding or cultivating tines. The dirt and safety shields snap on with pins.

• CULTIVATES
The real fun starts when you take the garden machine with the cultivator tines and straddle the row working both sides of the plant with pulverized soil. The soil is aerated, uprooting weeds and grasses placing the soil around your plants.

• AERATES
Thatch and aerate your lawn in minutes

• BEDS UP
Eliminate the back-breaking chore of hoeing up a planting bed with a quick change of tines, the garden machine beds up soil in one pass ready for planting.

• TILLS
the soil better and faster than standard tillers and with far less effort. Grass and weeds are cut, shredded and mulched with the soil.

Capacity and efficiency for fast harvesting

When it comes to harvesting, you can't beat the heavy-duty performance that's built into the New Holland Model 790 forage harvester. Performance starts at the cutterhead. The 19 1/16-inch wide, 12-knife cutterhead delivers a fine uniform chop that's just right for most silage feeding operations. And an electric clutch gives instant response and positive control on the reversing gearbox. The Model 790 is available with either a 540-rpm or a 1000-rpm PTO drive.

Stop in today and trade for the performance leader in harvesters—the "790" from Ford New Holland.

MODEL 120 CONVEY-N-FEED® END CHARGE FEEDER

Deep-trough, air-borne 14 in. belt carries 27% more feed than a flat 16 in. belt. 105% more than a flat 12 in. belt. Also, because 46% of the belt rides over thin air - instead of sliding on a metal surface there's less drag. Requires less HP, less energy...reduces wear on the belt. Belt returns conditions for reduced friction.
